THE BOER TERMS

WHAT BURGHERS DEMAND TO QUIT FIGHTING.

AN AUTHORITATIVE OUTLINE

ADMIT BRITISH SOVEREIGNTY OVER BOER STATES.

SOUTH AFRICAN FEDERATION

MAN CLOSE TO KRUGER SAYS THESE ARE THE TERMS.

Edinburgh, April 12.—The Evening News, of this city, whose editor is in close touch with Mr. Kruger, declares on the highest authority that the Boers are prepared to accept the following conditions:

They will not make absolute independence a cardinal feature, if they can come to a satisfactory agreement as to future internal government.

The banishment and confiscation of property proclamation must be cancelled and confiscated property must be restored to its owners, with remuneration for private stock and property destroyed or taken by the British.

Full recognition of state debts contracted before and after hostilities and up to the date of the annexation proclamation issued by Lord Roberts.

The language question to be mutually agreed upon.

Amnesty for the Cape rebels.

The release of all political prisoners.

A date to be fixed when all prisoners of war will be returned to South Africa.

The offices of one or two friendly powers to be accepted to superintend the carrying out of the terms of peace.

BRITISH CABINET MEETS.

London, April 12.—Both the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, and the colonial secretary, Joseph Chamberlain, attended the cabinet council held at the foreign office at noon today. Prior to the meeting of the ministers representatives of the Bank of England had a conference with the chancellor of the exchequer, indicating that the budget was a prominent subject of discussion by the ministers, especially as to the best means of issuing a war loan.

In consequence of the prominence given by the afternoon newspapers to the report that a cabinet crisis had occurred, owing to a breach between Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach on the method of raising war funds, Mr. Chamberlain today issued a signed statement saying that the report was pure invention and absolutely untrue.

Notwithstanding the sensational and diverse rumors evoked by the unexpected summoning of the cabinet, public interest as displayed in Downing street was of an exceedingly languid type. All the ministers were present with the exception of the lord lieutenant of Ireland, Earl Cadogan, from which it was inferred that the question of the immediate adoption of a more stringent policy towards the United Irish League did not occupy the foremost place at today's council.

Among the many peace rumors this morning the most interesting is to the effect that the Boers have intimated that they are willing to come into the British empire as junior partners, to give up their flag and become part of an African federation, with a flag of its own, with a supreme court, and with practically an American constitution.

FOOT BADLY CRUSHED.

Fred Horman, living at 1324 Ewing street, was run over by a heavily loaded wagon yesterday afternoon and his right foot was badly crushed and in addition the small bone of the leg was broken just above the ankle. Horman was driving a wagon loaded with machinery along Superior street when the accident occurred. The horses became frightened and Horman, in trying to control them, fell in front of the wagon, the front wheel passing over his foot. He was taken to his home in the patrol wagon, and was attended by Dr. G. E. Stemen.

A DISASTROUS WRECK.

Memphis, Tenn., April 12.—The northbound New Orleans limited train, No. 2, on the Illinois Central, due here at 6:35 a. m., ran into a switch engine in the Illinois Central yards at 7 o'clock today. The passenger engine, two baggage cars, mail and second-class coach were derailed. Fireman William Goodloe, colored, was killed; Engineer Charles J. Barnett, badly injured about the body; Express Messenger William E. Fink, of Cairo, sustained a fracture of the skull and severely bruised, and an unknown man, supposed to be a tramp, lost a hand and one eye. The accident was due to the fact that the passenger train was a half-hour late and the engineer of the switch engine thought it had already passed.

FIRE ON A TRANSPORT.

San Francisco, April 12.—Early today fire was discovered in the hold of the United States transport Sherman, lying at the government dock. An alarm was turned in and the city fire department immediately responded. In a short time the flames were under control and it is believed that the damage done is not serious. The fire originated in the sailors' storeroom, among a lot of oakum and old clothes, and is attributed to spontaneous combustion. The vessel is uninjured.

GAVE HIS FAMILY A SCARE

JULIUS EME HINTED THAT HE WOULD BE FOUND DEAD.

Later He Went Home to Explain Why He Thought So—Getting His Affairs Adjusted.

Julius J. Eme, the well known insurance agent, with offices in the Foster block, led the police and his family a merry chase yesterday. He lives at 331 Montgomery street, but had not been at home for several days. He finally sent his wife a note saying that he would prefer if Mr. Foster would not notify Col. C. E. Graves to call out the insurance men to attend his funeral and also giving the cheerful intelligence that from his pockets could be taken the keys to the safe where would be found the papers informing her how he had left her. Mrs. Eme fainted first and then sent word to the police department, accompanying the word with a photograph of her husband, and asking the department to look him up. Mr. Eme having dispatched his note properly, went home and told his wife that J. M. Wallace, a representative of one of the insurance companies he represented was in town to examine his books and that he did not want to see him because he was afraid some things might show up that he did not at present want known.

Relatives of the late John Langard, who was one of his bondsmen, were notified and this morning Mr. Wallace and Louis Langard, brother of the late bondsman, went to the Eme home with a bundle of books under their arms. Meantime Eme refused to explain to his wife or family where he had spent the two days of his absence, but the police yesterday discovered where he had put in the time, in saloons ranging from Seeling's on the Wayne trace to Gaetje's on Calhoun street.

Mr. Wallace, representing the National Fire Insurance company, and Mr. Langard, representing Mrs. John Langard, executrix of her husband's estate, returned from the Eme home shortly before noon. Mr. Wallace left for his company's headquarters in Dayton at 12:30, but before leaving said he wanted to deny a statement made in a morning paper that Eme's books were found in a muddled condition. He said that he never in all his experience examined a more perfect set of books. There were shortages, to be sure, but the books showed them plainly and there was no attempt made to cover them by false entries. The same condition, he said, existed on the ledger, where the accounts of other companies were represented. He stated further that the total amount for which the company held the Langard estate responsible is $508.19, and of that amount between $25 and $30 is uncollected. Mr. Wallace and Louis Langard both said that while they found Eme in a state of apparent physical collapse, he was all right mentally. He stated that he knew he was short but could not account for the disappearance of the money. He insisted that he did not drink to excess, had never gambled and simply could not tell what had become of the money.

Mr. Langard, when asked whether criminal proceedings would be commenced, declared emphatically that there would not be.

Eme represented the Caledonian Fire Insurance company and recently lost a company, which was taken away from him, and in all his books show that he carried a good line and was apparently doing a profitable business. It is hinted that there are other financial disturbances and shortages, but only a few little ones have come to the surface and all are expected to be satisfactorily adjusted.

A QUIET SURFACE

SEMBLANCE OF ORDER IS RESTORED IN BRUSSELS.

MASSES ARE IN A FERMENT

STRIKES SPREADING AND AN UPRISING IMMINENT.

TROOPS ARE NOT TRUSTED

SOCIALISM HAS PERMEATED THE RANKS.

Brussels, April 12.—The rioters have been temporarily awed by the overpowering display of armed force. Up to noon today no further disturbances had occurred here. The number of police, gendarmes and soldiers at the disposal of the authorities appears sufficient to cope with disturbances, so long as the troops remain loyal.

The strike continues to spread in the central coal districts. Elsewhere the socialist leaders are trying to keep the men at work until Monday or Tuesday, when they contemplate an important movement.

Perhaps the most significant event of yesterday was the open rupture in the chamber of deputies between the socialists and the liberal faction, heretofore associated with the former, with the object of forcing the government to grant universal suffrage. This split notably strengthens the government's hands in the present crisis, as the coalition of the moderate parties promises to last as long as the incipient revolution continues.

The police, gendarmes and civic guards, who are all regarded as thoroughly trustworthy, are being utilized, so far as possible, in dealing with those who take part in demonstrations, but not in riots. These demonstrations are mostly composed of earnest socialists, while the rioters are more closely allied with anarchism.

Regarding the troops, there is no doubt that they are leavened with socialism. Many men in the ranks do not hesitate to expound subversive doctrines, and there is some apprehension as to their loyalty when the acute stage of the agitation is reached, with the beginning of the general strike next week. The government has taken the most comprehensive measures not to be taken by surprise, and is firmly resolved not to yield to the revolutionary movement, holding that in order to deal properly with the questions of the revision of the constitution and universal suffrage it is essential that parliament be able to deliberate uninfluenced by the mob.

In consequence of the receipt of a letter threatening to blow up with dynamite the Fadence works at La Louviere, unless work there is stopped, the manager has shut down the factory and has ordered the 1,200 employes, who include 500 women, to immediately leave the premises.

PUTTING IN A TELEPHONE.

This afternoon the Home Telephone company is making telephonic connection with the isolation hospital at the county farm. Heretofore there had been no means by which the smallpox patients there could communicate with the outer world except as attendants made their regular visits at the hospital, and the placing of the 'phone by the Home company will be highly appreciated.

TO ANDREWS BY MAY 1.

General Manager Nelson this morning expressed the confident opinion that by May 1 the Southwestern would be running its cars as far west as Andrews. Work is being pushed rapidly west from Huntington, and the company was today advised that the 1,350 tons of rails necessary to complete the track to Wabash would be shipped next week.

ALL CABINETS WILL MEET.

The cabinets of all the Epworth Leagues in the city will hold a meeting at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Berry Street M. E. church to arrange for the proper observance of the League anniversary Sunday. It is possible that a union service may be held.

KILLING IS JUSTIFIED.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 12.—Judge Kennedy, of the central police court, today discharged Charles Anderson, who yesterday shot and killed William Franks in South Euclid, a suburb. After a brief hearing the court said it was a clear case of self-defense. It was shown that Anderson did not shoot until he had been assaulted and that Franks had frequently threatened to kill him. Twenty-four hours before the shooting Anderson married the divorced wife of Franks. Anderson recently came here from Ainsley, a suburb of Birmingham, Ala.

POSTOFFICE IS ROBBED.

Hamlet, Ind., April 12.—Special.—Burglars effected an entrance into the postoffice in this village last night and robbed it of stamps to the value of $500. The general store adjoining, owned by I. N. Compton, was also entered and a large amount of jewelry taken. Bloodhounds are being used to trace the robbers, but up to 2 p. m. no arrests have been made.

PROF. MILLER IS ARRAIGNED

DETROIT MURDERER TAKEN IN TO MAKE PLEA.

Attorney of Miller Demands an Inquiry Into the Sanity of Carrie Jennett's Slayer.

Detroit, Mich., April 12.—Prof. Joseph M. Miller, the music teacher who yesterday confessed to having murdered Miss Carrie M. Jennett with a hatchet, was arraigned in the recorder's court at 10 o'clock. Judge Murphy appointed F. C. Chamberlain to act as the murderer's attorney. Attorney Chamberlain raised the question of Miller's sanity and said that while he had no desire to delay action the matter ought to be determined now. Judge Murphy therefore appointed three alienists to examine Miller. The plea of guilty or not guilty was held in abeyance until this afternoon when the result of the alienists' examination will be known.

The three alienists, Drs. Emerson, Kennedy and Hitchcock, found that Miller was sane. He will be taken to court again this afternoon, his plea of guilty accepted and by night he will be en route to the penitentiary.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Willie Reichelderfer (age 18) and Leona Garten (age 16). Written consent of the parents of both accompanied the application.

Ollie Groemaker and Eva Mulvine. Both employed at the Queen restaurant and married by France shortly after noon.

Frank Bubb and Mary Metker.

PROF. KIRCHENER IS KILLED.

Valparaiso, Ind., April 12.—Prof. George Kirchener, a prominent educator and musician of this city, was struck by a Lake Shore train at the Sherston crossing late yesterday afternoon and instantly killed. He had but recently returned from Germany, where he received a considerable fortune left him by the death of a relative. Since his return he had given considerable sums to various religious and educational projects and was arranging a series of similar gifts.

WOMAN BADLY HURT.

Mrs. W. R. Gillespie, of 50 Force street, was thrown from her buggy at the corner of Berry and Clinton streets, and immediately after one of the horses of a passing team trampled upon her head and it is feared her skull was fractured by the animal's hoof. Mrs. Gillespie was taken into Garrett's drugstore, where Dr. Will Stemen attended, her and later removed to her home.

ROASTED WALLER

JUDGE ADVOCATE CLOSES IN COURT MARTIAL.

MARINE THIRSTED FOR GLORY

SLAYER OF PRISONERS IN SAMAR EXCORIATED.

IS BLAMED FOR DISASTERS

DRAMATIC DENUNCIATION OF THE SLAUGHTER.

Manila, April 12.—The judge advocate, Major Henry P. Kingsbury, replied today to the summing up before the court martial yesterday of Capt. Arthur T. Marix, representing Maj. Littleton W. T. Waller, who is being tried for executing natives of Samar without trial. Major Kingsbury made an eloquent address. He contended that Major Waller was under military and not martial law, and that there was nothing in the conduct of the men who were shot deserving of such punishment. The judge advocate blamed Major Waller himself for the disasters which befell the marines and accused him of abandoning ten helpless comrades, "whose bones were now bleaching on the banks of the Lanang," to die of hunger.

The judge advocate's denunciation of the methods by which the prisoners who were to be shot were chosen, was dramatic.

They were lined up, he said, "for the raffle of death at the sole will and pleasure of Private Davis, a marine, who was judge and executioner, and professed many arms." He referred to Davis' testimony in terms of withering scorn, accused Major Waller of listening to the dictates of ambition and not to the dictates of duty; asserted that the natives, according to the evidence, acted in many instances in a highly commendable manner, and declared that their faithfulness and not their treachery had been disclosed before the court.

Captain Marix requested permission to make a short reply. He protested strongly against criticism of the way in which Major Waller had conducted the campaign, which, he said, was outside the case, and again insisted that martial law ruled by the mere nature of the conditions.

The court deliberated less than half an hour. No decision was announced.

GAS MAGNATES ARE COMING

WILL LOOK OVER SITUATION IN FORT WAYNE.

H. C. Paul Returns from New York—No Decision Has Been Reached Regarding Future Policy.

Henry C. Paul, accompanied by Mrs. Paul, returned last evening from New York, where they have been spending the past week. Local rumor after Mr. Paul's departure was to the effect that his business in the east was to consult with members of the Fort Wayne Gas company regarding the preparation of a franchise providing for the universal use of gas meters in this vicinity.

Questioned on this point this morning Mr. Paul said such a statement was entirely unauthorized, and that the company had reached no decision as to the future policy to be followed in the selling of gas to consumers. Within a very few weeks, however, President C. F. Dieterich, Secretary A. B. Proal and other eastern members of the company will arrive in Fort Wayne to look over the situation, and at the same time some decision will be reached as to the future. The present ordinance of the company has one year yet to run.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Washington, April 12.—This was private pension day in the house. Before the regular order was taken up some business was transacted by unanimous consent. Some minor bills were passed and the house then went into committee of the whole and proceeded with the consideration of private pension bills.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, April 12.—When the senate convened today, Mr. Mason, of Illinois, presented the conference report on the postoffice appropriation bill and it was agreed to.

IT STARTLED HIM.

Yesterday afternoon George Swain was approached by a woman on Columbia street who spoke to him like an acquaintance, asking him where her husband was. Mr. Swain mistook her for the widow of a well known business man dead some three or four years, and thinking perhaps she was joking on even so serious a matter, said: "Why, last I heard of him he was dead." The woman gave one agonizing look, and then screaming at the top of her voice, ran down the street, saying, "He's dead! He's dead!" Mr. Swain was so well satisfied that the woman was the widow in question that he was not convinced to the contrary until a few hours later when the lady was communicated with at Lafayette, where she is visiting friends. Who the woman was is not known.

SCORED A GREAT TRIUMPH

PITTSBURG ORCHESTRA HAS SPLENDID RECEPTION.

Masonic Temple Packed With the Most Enthusiastic Audience Ever at a Concert Here.

Victor Harbert and his Pittsburg orchestra achieved a triumph last evening in this city that must long remain notable. To an audience that completely packed the Masonic Temple, Mr. Herbert and his superb company of musicians played a program that in selection and arrangement left nothing to be desired, unless it were more of it. But the marvel of the event was the lofty pitch of enthusiasm to which the vast audience was aroused by that orchestra under the mastery of Mr. Herbert. The program was most admirably selected, both to display the orchestra and delight an audience. It was dignified, but not severe and appealed to the natural and untechnical love of music. It was a program that everyone could understand and appreciate and that everyone did so was made manifest at the conclusion of the first number, when a real ovation greeted the conductor. After that from one to five encores were demanded at the conclusion of every orchestral number. Near the close of the program Mr. Herbert and the orchestra responded five times to the enthusiastic encore of the big audience. Mr. Herbert was very generous throughout and showed his thorough appreciation of the welcome he received.

Miss Annie Bussert, soprano, who formerly sang in Westminster church, in this city, was most heartily greeted when she appeared and most roundly encored at the conclusion of her selection from "Carmen." She sang next "Cupid and I," from the "Serenade," and "Who'll Buy My Lavender?" with exquisite effect. Miss Bussert has vastly improved both in voice and art. Her presence is very graceful and unaffected.

Henri Merck, 'cellist, enraptured the audience by his two selections and the delighted listeners did not want to permit him to leave them.

Mr. Herbert and his orchestra will be welcomed back to this city at any time hereafter, and when he comes again there is likely to be a riot at the box office for seats.

TALMAGE'S END VERY NEAR

GREAT PREACHER STEADILY SINKING.

Is Profoundly Unconscious and Death Is Now a Matter of But a Few Hours.

The survival of Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage is now only a question of hours. The inflamed condition of his brain has grown more acute and his unconsciousness more profound. The physicians, who have been in constant attendance upon him, say that there is not a ray of hope for his recovery, and after their consultation at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon announced that his condition continues to grow worse and that the stricken Presbyterian minister is merely "lingering." Many messages of sympathy from friends and admirers of Dr. Talmage are constantly arriving at the family residence.

A bulletin issued late this afternoon by the attending physicians says:

"Dr. Talmage is gradually sinking. He may last through the evening. He is profoundly unconscious."

Hugh Hite, of Decatur, has taken a position in the offices of the Jamney Electric Light and Power company. Mr. Hite was a student at the International Business college.

PEOPLE IN PANIC

INCENDIARY FIRES ALARM SOUTH CHICAGO FOLK.

MANY BLAZES ARE KINDLED

HALF A SCORE OF FIRES IN A FEW HOURS.

NO CLUE TO THE MISCREANTS

PEOPLE BREATHED EASIER AT BREAK OF DAY.

Chicago, April 12.—After extinguishing ten fires yesterday, most of them close together and apparently of incendiary origin, the firemen of South Chicago at daybreak today were called upon to contend with the most serious of the long string of blazes. The first of this morning's fires consumed a barn containing several horses. St. Patrick's church came next and was destroyed before the firemen could reach it. Scarcely had they reached the church when they were called to fight a dangerous looking fire at Willard Sons & Bell forge works. After a hard fight here the flames were checked. Meanwhile the warehouse of the Washington Ice company had caught fire and before the flames were subdued $5,000 damage had been done. The Calumet theater came next, sustaining $10,000 damage before the fire was extinguished. A four-story structure, having a feed store on the ground floor and dwelling above, was discovered to be burning before the theater fire was put out. Two families escaped in their night clothes. The building was destroyed. Meanwhile Nicholas Schroeder's saloon was burned down. The total loss of this morning's fires is put at $50,000. As the buildings were not near each other, the firemen declare that the fires were the work of an incendiary. The people of South Chicago were greatly alarmed by the rapid work of the firebug and a careful watch is being kept today.

The financial loss in the fires yesterday aggregated $80,000. Evidence of incendiarism was so convincing, however, that citizens joined the police in patrolling the streets in an effort to guard property and capture the incendiary or incendiaries. In spite of the extra precautions, however, today's fires were started. Citizens were bewildered at the attack and daylight was welcomed with great relief.

CONSIDER IT TODAY.

Stockholders of the Utility and the Paragon Paper companies are to hold a meeting late this afternoon to consider an offer for the merging of their mills into a new strawboard combination. The Sentinel some time ago noted that an attempt was being made by outside interests to get the Fort Wayne companies' mills into the big concern, and that accountants had been in the city taking an inventory on which to base a proposition for the purchase of the properties. None of the stockholders are willing to predict what action will be taken at the meeting today, but it is known that the properties are good paying ones, and the owners are in no wise anxious to sell.

POST LENTEN SERMONS.

Rev. L. J. Mutchman, pastor of Christ's Lutheran church, announces the following Sunday morning topics during the next four Sundays:

Sunday, April 13—"Mary Magdalene and Her Risen Lord."

Sunday, April 20—"Thomas Absent When Jesus Came."

Sunday, April 27—"Walking With Jesus to Emmaus."

Sunday, May 4—"Seen by Seven Apostles at the Sea of Galilee."

The general purpose of these sermons will be to strengthen faith in the fact of the resurrection.

BASE BALL CLUB ORGANIZED.

At a meeting of the Broadway base ball club in the Eureka bowling alleys last evening Peter Dittoe was elected captain and William Connelly manager. The line-up of the club is as follows: Catcher, F. Eggeman; first base, J. O'Neil; second base, C. Durfee; third base, D. O'Neil; short stop, O. Baales; center field, J. Forman; left fielder, E. McCarthy; right field, C. Kramer; pitchers, Hilliker and Dittoe.

The ladies of the Amicus club, with their husbands, were charmingly entertained last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Outshall, on South Harrison street, where Mrs. Outshall was assisted by Mrs. George DeWald and Mrs. B. B. Bradbaker. First prizes were won by Mrs. Mont Beaver and George DeWald.

HORNE INVOLVED

BY CHARGES OF WORKING A PRIVATE GRAFT.

A TURN IN PRISON SCANDAL

SAID TO HAVE HAD A RAKE-OFF ON VACCINE POINTS.

PROGRESS OF THE INQUIRY

CHARGES OF CRUELTY GIVEN PROOF BY TESTIMONY.

Michigan City, April 12.—Sensational charges of personal and official dishonesty while in office were presented today to the state board of charities against Dr. Brose S. Horne, late prison physician of the state penitentiary here. The charges, it is asserted, are really to offset those presented by the combination of prison contractors, prison officials and politicians affected by the charges of brutality and mismanagement filed against them by Dr. Horne and now under investigation.

Dr. Horne is charged with having accepted while prison physician commissions from the Woods Vaccine Virus company, of Oak Park, Chicago, on vaccine points sold through him to the state prison. There is a possibility also that he may be accused of taking money from friends of prisoners for the use of his influence in keeping them in the hospital and out of regular prison. A private detective named Cassidy, who was formerly chief of police of South Bend, figures in the charges. Who hired him, whether the state prison board of control or Warden Reid or Deputy Barnard or the contractors is carefully concealed.

TELLS OF LETTER.

Cassidy says he was subpoenaed to appear before the charities board, and that he had nothing to say until after his evidence is presented. Cassidy, after a trip to Chicago, claims to have in his possession a letter of the following nature:

"Michigan City, Ind., Oct. 15, 1901.—E. W. Wood, M. D., Oak Park, Ill.—Dear Sir: Please send a bill to Warden Shideler for vaccine and charge $1 a package and send me all above 30 cents. Send bill for full amount. When you secure your money you can send me mine. Send bill to George A. H. Shideler, warden Indiana state prison, Michigan City, Indiana; say for vaccination, prisoners, 57 packages, $1 each, lot 57.

"Yours, Brose S. Horne.

"P. S.—Date your invoice Nov. 1, 1901."

Cassidy also claims to have secured the following letter, marked "personal" and alleged to have been written in December, 1901:

"Dr. Woods, Oak Park, Ill. Dear Doctor:—Draft is sent to you this date for $57 for vaccine virus. Please send me my one-half, or $28.50, but when you send mail in an envelope without any printing on outside. I will give you another order before long. Some of the virus did not act, but we will say nothing about it, and will not ask for new virus free. Please send my money soon. Address letter as below.

"Yours fraternally,

"Brose S. Horne,

"Prison Physician."

EVIDENCE IN CHECK.

A third alleged bit of evidence is check No. 4333, written at Oak Park, dated Dec. 7, 1901, drawn on the Avenue State bank and payable to Brose S. Horne. The check is for $28 50 and is signed by the Chicago vaccine stables. The indorsement on the back of the check is "Brose S. Horne."

In prison circles there is much chuckling over the possibility that this attack on Dr. Horne may divert public attention from the prison scandal itself. Before Dr. Horne filed his charges he was warned, "Don't do it. You will regret it all your life if you do. Simply resign and go away and establish a practice and let the charges go."

This the doctor refused to do. He believed the truth of his charges was equal to the political strength of Deputy Warden Barnard and he has made the test. He has demonstrated, it is asserted, that the state board of charities should discharge at least two of the guards in the prison, that Deputy Warden Barnard has used foul language and that brutality has prevailed in the prison.

FOOD CHARGE SUSTAINED.

He was also sustained last night in evidence given by the butcher of the prison, the cook and the clerk of the hospital, that tainted meat, rotten figs and other unfit food has been used.

To the Cassidy charges Dr. Horne declines to make specific reply except to say that he was originally the agent of the Woods company when he lived at Bluffton; that he had accepted legitimate commissions from them, and that he had nothing to fear or run away from.

The last witness examined last night by the charities board was former Warden George A. Shideler, who pleaded guilty to a poor memory, but was sure no brutal act against a prisoner had ever been committed while he was in the prison.

Deputy Warden Barnard says he is satisfied with the investigation and that he will be exonerated.

TESTIMONY OF CONVICTS.

Convict testimony introduced under oath tended to sustain the charges of cruelty and brutality made by Dr. Horne. Dr. Horne again was not permitted to have counsel for the the purpose of cross-examination. Judge Sidney B. Davis questioned for the charities board, and every approach to the convict contract labor system was carefully guarded.

Each convict was sworn, and each was assured by Governor Durbin, Warden Reid and Deputy Warden Barnard that no matter what evidence he gave he would not be persecuted nor punished by prison officials for testifying. This assurance was given after Dr. Horne had said to Governor Durbin:

"I would request that while convicts are testifying Deputy Warden Barnard be absent from the room. They are afraid of him and fear punishment later if they tell the truth."

Convict Cooksey, a negro, insane, was brought in, but could not testify. He was a mental wreck. Dr. Horne had testified that he had been informed that Cooksey had been kicked, choked and knocked down by Guards Bohland and Webster last December.

STYLED AN OUTRAGE.

The convict's appearance was such that President Nicholson sprang up from his chair and said: "It is a perfect outrage that these insane people should be sent here, where it is intended only convicts shall be cared for. It is an outrage that the legislature does not provide us with an asylum for them."

ALL READY FOR GRAND LODGE

ROYAL ARCANUM COMMITTEE COMPLETING PREPARATIONS.

Outline of the Delegate Meeting in Fort Wayne Thursday and Friday, April 24 and 25.

Arrangements for the Royal Arcanum grand lodge to be held in this city April 24 and 25 have been practically completed. Those having the local end of the affair in charge have been advised that there will be about fifty delegates present and that each is likely to be accompanied by his wife or some other member of his family, making the total number of visitors here for that purpose about 100. The Wayne hotel will be headquarters and there all the business sessions will be held, including the auditing of the books, the meeting of the committees on laws, credentials and distributions and the reading of all reports. This will occupy the attention of the delegates the greater portion of the first day of the meeting and while they are thus employed their wives will be shown about the city by the wives of the local Royal Arcanum members, and if the weather is pleasant, given an excursion to Robison park. Thursday evening occurs the banquet at the Wayne club. Friday morning the visiting ladies and gentlemen will be treated to a carriage ride before the opening of the business session of that day. M. E. Tuttle and John R. Kretsinger will represent Howard council, of this city, at the grand lodge meeting. Grand officers who will be in attendance are Grand Regent Millican, of Evansville; Grand Treasurer Byram, of Indianapolis; Grand Secretary Schroer, Indianapolis; Finance Committeemen Hough, Escock and Camper and Past Grand Regents J. N. Study, W. H. Stephenson, John Vordermark and W. H. Tigar, who are life members of the grand council, and Grand Secretary J. B. Brown. The local lodge will put forward every effort for the entertainment of their guests on that occasion.

TOLD TWO TALES

DID MR. THOMPSON AND BOTH WERE UNTRUE.

BUT HE DID STOP A BULLET

WAS PROWLING ABOUT SOUTH-SIDE HOME.

MR. SEATON DID SHOOTING

PERU RAILROAD MAN CAUSES A SENSATION.

Harry Thompson, a Wabash brakeman living at Peru, loaded his pipe full of happy dreams last night, lit it and proceeded to have visions of the wierdest kind. About half an hour after midnight the 'bus barn received an order for a hack to call at the Wabash depot to take a man who had been shot to the St. Joseph hospital, and about the same time Officer Gus Borgman learned that there had been some shooting done on the south side, and also learned about the call for the hack. He laid in wait about the depot and soon saw a hack stop in front of Hinton's restaurant. He went there, arriving in time to see a man come down stairs with one shoulder drawn as though in pain, and accompanied by a man who proved to be Conductor Lawrence, also of the Wabash.

The men entered the carriage and drove away hurriedly and Borgman followed on foot. Arriving at the hospital, in answer to an inquiry he was informed that a telephone message had been received a short time before asking that a room be prepared for a man who had been shot, but the sister said no one had yet appeared to claim it. Meantime Borgman had been joined by Officer Blum and together they went back down town to the 'bus barn to inquire what had become of the cab driver who had the Wabash call, and were informed that he had just reported back from that call and had gone to the Wayne club on another call. He was found there and insisted that he had delivered his men at the hospital. He was held in custody until the hospital was again reached by telephone and the information was reported that no such patient had been received. The cabman then admitted that the men had inquired for a physician when unloaded.

The officers then telephoned to Dr. C. B. Stemen, living opposite the hospital, who informed Borgman that two men had called, one of whom was wounded, and that he had referred them to his son, Dr. Will Stemen, living over the White Fruit House. Dr. Will Stemen was aroused and said that he had met nobody that night troubled with shooting scrapes. Borgman then had a happy thought. "That fellow's bluffing," he said, "and I'll bet he's down at the Wabash yards right this minute, waiting to get out of town on the first west-bound train." Acting on this thought he and his brother officer went to the Wabash yards and searched all around, finally finding Thompson snugly ensconced in an empty passenger car.

He was taken into custody and asked to explain. Then his pipe commenced to work. He said that he was going down Calhoun street when he was met by a woman who gave him the "high sign." He followed her for a number of squares and finally she stopped until he caught up with her. She pointed to a man ahead of them carrying a dinner basket, saying that that was her husband, just going out on his run on the Pennsylvania road. She pointed to a house close by, saying that she lived there and that he should come to the back door in ten minutes. He went and was admitted. Five minutes later there was a rap at the front door and he went to the kitchen. The front door was opened and the man made a straight rush through the house. Thompson ran away, followed by the man who shot him in the shoulder, after which he succeeded in getting away. Borgman asked him where the shooting occurred and Thompson said he did not know the street or house number, but could take them to the place. He was hustled along and finally pointed out a house, but when the officer tried to rouse the people, Thompson weakened and said he guessed that was not the place. Then he led the officers to a house on East Butler street, some half a dozen squares distant, and said that was where the woman lived.

Meantime Captain Whitney had joined the party and he started to inquire at the house, whereupon Thompson weakened and said it was at another house where he had been prowling around, upon questioning admitting that he had not been in the house at all, had not talked to any woman, but had been chased off the lot by a man with a vicious gun. The captain went to the house designated, occupied by Mrs. Mary Gaffney. A daughter said that when she returned home she was followed by a man, who afterward was chased away by William Seaton, living next door on the corner, at 201 East Butler street. Thompson was then taken to the station, where it was found that he had a slight wound in the right shoulder, evidently made by a bullet. Dr. Schilling was called.

AT POLICE COURT.

Thompson was arraigned at police court this morning, charged with trespass. He pleaded not guilty and demanded an attorney. Judge Dreibelbiss decided to hear the evidence and protect the prisoner's right without prejudice to his case. The only witness examined was William Seaton, the young man who did the shooting. He testified that he left a car at the corner of Calhoun and Hamilton streets at about 11:35 and went direct to his home at 201 East Butler street. He is employed as a conductor on the Fort Wayne Traction company's lines and it has been the custom of the folks at home to leave the side door open when he was out late. He found it locked and rapped for admission. His sister came to the door and his mother was still up. He asked why they had locked the door and they said they had seen a man prowling around and peeping in windows for over half an hour, and were afraid. He went upstairs, got a revolver and started out to investigate. In an adjoining yard he saw a man crouching behind a terrace. He called to him, whereupon the man got up to run. He called to him to stop, but he kept on running, whereupon he fired into the air. He chased the man across a vacant lot and through an alley and called to him again and fired the second time. Near Lafayette street, for the first time, he fired at the man, and if the man was hit at all, that was the shot that took effect, but the man ran only the faster and he soon gave up the chase. The man was in size about such a man as the prisoner, but he could not identify him by countenance or clothes, and could not swear whether he was the man he pursued or not. There was no further evidence and upon motion of the prosecutor the case was dismissed.

POLICE NOTES.

Judge Dreibelbiss ingratiated himself with the police department this morning by placing two boxes of cigars on tap, and of these the press reporters were invited to partake moderately.

The bicycle reported stolen from the Hanna street bicycle shop on Thursday night was returned by the renter the same evening, but he failed to report it to the proprietor.

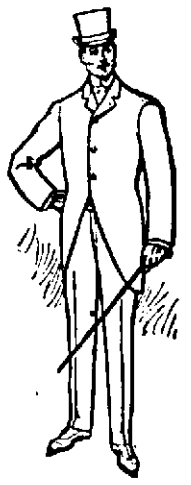

There was another social row in the Friday family, on Brandriff street, last night, but when the police arrived quiet had been restored, the sweet dove of peace was perched on every chair and there were no arrests.

Eli H. Garman, a farmer living north of the city, came to town yesterday and bought fifty pounds of blasting powder, ten pounds of tobacco and several pounds of salt, which he loaded in the back part of his buggy and started for home. When he reached the farm the entire cargo was missing. He don't know whether the stuff was stolen out of the buggy before he started or whether he lost it on the way. The only thing he is absolutely certain about is that he didn't have it when he got home and that the powder didn't go off en route.

At the close of the games the guests were escorted to the home of Mrs. Fitch, but a few doors away, where an elaborate three-course luncheon was served. The house was artistically decorated with sweet peas and maidenhair ferns.

Black Hair

For 50 years Ayer's Hair Vigor has been restoring color to gray hair. It never fails to do this work, either. Besides this, it keeps the scalp clean and healthy, stops falling of the hair, and makes the hair grow thick and long. It's a regular hair-food.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps my scalp clean and healthy. It stopped the falling of my hair, also, and made it grow nicely. I receive many compliments for my beautiful head of hair."

THINK SWARTZ WILL LIVE.

(Bluffton News.)

J. A. Swartz and family returned to Craigville last night after a trip to Fort Wayne to see his brother, Christian, who was kicked by a horse last Monday. The injured man will live, although he suffered a terrible injury. The horse's hoof struck him in the forehead and the surgeons removed a large piece of bone which was pressed in on the brain.

Health Commissioner Macbeth was breathing easy and with much satisfaction remarked that there had been no new cases of smallpox reported, that there were no suspicious symptoms anywhere apparent and that all the patients were doing well.

A NEW BABY.

Old One Made Over by Grape-Nuts.

A delicious food that is nourishing for both mother and infant may be depended upon to fit other people. This mother's story is interesting:

"My baby is now a fine, robust little fellow two years and six months old, but I had a dreadful time with him at first. I could not nurse him, because I was so weak I did not have the milk for him, so I gave him different kinds of foods, but he was crying nearly all of the time and would vomit after every meal.

"His condition worked on my nerves dreadfully and I called in Dr. Campbell. After inquiring carefully into the case, he said: 'You send at once for some Grape-Nuts, take four teaspoonsful in a cup of hot milk on going to bed; also feed you baby on some of the food in hot milk.'

"Well, I followed the doctor's advice with good results at once. I could nurse my baby and he began to improve immediately. I, myself, got strong and well very rapidly.

"The neighbors were, of course, interested and they would always say, 'How fast you are improving.' 'How the little boy grows,' 'He don't look like the same baby; what are you feeding him?' So I have had to tell them one and all how Grape-Nuts have brought us both back to health. I wish other mothers knew of the value of this food."

Dr. Horne's charges affecting the prison management will not be altogether in vain, even if nothing more is established than that Dr. Horne was conducting a little "graft" on his own account.

Former Mayor Taggart, of Indianapolis, has been selected by the democratic congressional committee to serve on the executive committee related to that body. Lewis Nixon, the Secretary of State Olney and Former Secretary of Sate Olney and Foremr Secretary of War Lamont, are also among those chosen for membership on the committee.

It is probably well that the governor of Missouri found it possible to sleep soundly before giving attention to a state's attorney's prayer for respite of a man condemned to die. The governor's message granting a stay of execution reached the gallows about half an hour after the uphappy man had gone through the trap at a rope's end. There is something rather horrible about the affair, though there is no certainty that the man would not ultimately have been executed.

President Roosevelt has disposed of two offices that have been giving considerable embarassment. The first assistant postmaster generalship, which had gone begging from state to state during the past two months was finally taken by a working newspaper man in Washington. The other office is the pension bureau from which Commissioner Evans has just resigned. The president's choice for this important place is rather surprising, though the appointment may be most admirable for all that. Eugene Ware, the appointee, is a Kansas lawyer, comparatively a young man, and but little known outside his state. He writes poetry and under the pseudonym "Ironquill" is quite well known. He wrote that most engaging ditty which was inspired by certain events of May 1, 1898, beginning "Dewey was the morning," though that ought not always to be held against him. Poets may sometimes grow repentant.

Charges, supported by some evidence, have been made against Dr. Horne, the late physician of the Michigan City prison and author of the charges now being investigated. These charges also should be looked into. What the people of Indiana want is not the whitewashing of anybody. The testimony already taken shows there was much foundation for Dr. Horne's charges of cruelty to convicts, but that does not prove that Dr. Horne was not conducting a little "graft" of his own. Whatever turns up that needs investigating should be looked into while the inquiry is on.

General MacArthur says the Filipinos will some day become a most enlightened and progressive people. He characterizes the natives as highly imaginative, with strong artistic instincts, deft of hand and of peculiar fitness for musical and dramatic arts. It is agreeable to receive this testimony from a man who knows what he is talking about, for it will probably help congress to determine that less military and more civil rule is what is needed in the islands. The conditions complained of by Colonel Gardener, governor of Tayabas province, and the orders Major Waller declares he received from General Smith in Samar are not apt to do much toward reconciling an imaginative and artistic people to the sovereignty of the United States. Fire and sword are not ready promoters of good feeling and butchery can hardly be considered a moral uplift.

IT ENDED IN A FIGHT.

Washington, Ind., April 12.—A burlesque company gave a show here last night, during which they ridiculed several citizens in an objectionable way. Addie Dillard and one of the performers came to blows in the theater because of an alleged insult. After the performance was over the manager, C. B. Ransom, and an actor, James Bonham, were attacked by John Brennan. Addie Dillard and other citizens as they were going down the street. Ransom and Bonham were terribly beaten and barely escaped with their lives. The women in the company escaped by fleeing to a hotel.

GOOD LAW BUT BAD MORALS.

(Indianapolis News.)

The supreme court yesterday decided that the trick of the republican legislature to get control of the Fort Wayne police judgeship was within the law. We do not see how it could have decided any other way, and yet it is a pity that our courts cannot, in some way, take note of the motive of an act when it is so base, as it was in this case. The legislature decided that Fort Wayne ought to have a police judge, but inasmuch as the city was democratic and so would elect a democrat to the office, it was provided that the office should not come into existence till two days after the city election last May. The democrats nominated a candidate for the office, and, of course, elected him, the republicans making no nomination. Governor Durbin appointed a republican to fill the "vacancy" which the republican legislature really created when it created the office, and the supreme court upholds the claim of the governor's appointee. It is held that the democrat had no right to the office, inasmuch as at the time he was elected to it the office was not in existence—which was true.

So the trick wins, but it is none the less disreputable. We have simply a small and disgraceful grab for spoil on the part of the legislature and a denial to the people of Fort Wayne of the right to elect their police judge. So we say, it is a pity that there is no way in which our courts can get a grip on such cases as this. There are many of them in our politics. In the matter of taxation, for instance, there are many taxes that are laid not for revenue, but for protection or prohibition, or some other doubtful and possibly unconstitutional purpose, but the courts have held that they cannot question the motive of the legislative department, and that when congress says that a tax is for revenue, the courts must take its word. Probably it is better so—but still we regret to see the trick win, as it has won in this instance. The republicans have the office, but that is all they have.

EX-SHERIFF WINS SUIT.

Ex-Sheriff Albert E. Melching has just emerged victorious from a suit tried in the DeKalb circuit court that arose from Mr. Melching's strict performance of his duty while sheriff of Allen county. Some years ago Charles E. Dudgeon, of Scipio township, rented his farm to a man named Hubbard, from Ohio, who failed to comply with his agreement regarding the payment of personal property and Dudgeon recovered judgment against him in 1898. Sheriff Melching, in due process of law, proceeded to sell the property to satisfy the judgment, after a mortgage which the tenant had placed upon the personal property had been declared fraudulent. A portion of this mortgage was a claim for $318 owed to a Hicksville firm, and when the mortgage was declared illegal by the court the Ohio people brought suit against Mr. Melching and his bondsmen to recover $600. The bondsmen are J. F. W. Meyer, Charles McCulloch, John Mohr, jr., and S. B. Bond, and Mr. Melching fought the case vigorously in their protection. It was twice tried, the first jury disagreeing, the latter returning a verdict in favor of Mr. Melching. Judge Powers, of Angola, presided, and Mr. Melching's attorneys were E. V. Harris, of this city, and Hoffman & Link, of Auburn. The ex-sheriff is naturally gratified at the outcome of the long-fought case, but he is wondering who is to reimburse him for the $200 expended in witnesses and attorneys' fees in defending himself for a strict performance of his duty as a servant of Allen county.

VETERAN LEGION'S MEMORIAL.

The Union Veteran Legion has accepted the invitation of Rev. E. W. Allen, of the West Jefferson street Church of Christ, to hold memorial services at that church the first Sunday in June. The veterans will meet at their hall and proceed in a body to the church, where an elaborate program will be given.

ANOTHER REVOLT.

Bombay, April 12.—Another revolt against the Portuguese has broken out at Goa, the colony of Portugal on the west coast of India. The leader of the Mahratta landowners has taken up arms, with 5,000 followers, who have burned the military barracks at Valpoy, where some soldiers were killed.

A SCREW LOOSE SOMEWHERE.

We often pity a young person when we see their otherwise handsome face covered with pimples and little sores. How often in youth are these faces scarred or pitted for life. When your blood is impure, these impurities generally break out in some manner, and your face being tender, gives way first. We have never seen a case of this kind but what would yield to the popular blood remedy, Conklin's Microbe Destroyer. $1.00 bottles at 75c at Rhodes', Cut-Rate Druggist, southeast corner Broadway and Washington. 10&13

PUT THE ROOSTER IN POLITICS

BLUFFTON PATRIARCH LAYS CLAIM TO THAT HONOR.

Uncle Sammy Gruwell, 84 Years Old, Says He Selected Fowl as the Democratic Emblem.

Bluffton, Ind., April 12.—Uncle Samuel Gruwell, one of the best known figures in Indiana politics, is preparing to celebrate his eighty-fourth birthday, which occurs April twenty-fifth. Uncle Sammy has lived in Bluffton but four years, but in that time has endeared himself in the hearts of all who know him and he has hosts of acquaintances made chiefly while attending political meetings. When physically able he never fails to attend a political gathering, especially if it is a meeting of democrats.

He was born in Indiana on the west fork of the little Whitewater, five miles above Connersville, April 23, 1818. His father was one of the early settlers of Wayne county and Uncle Sammy has an inexhaustible fund of stories of pioneer days, handed down to him as one of the chief legacies of his father's estate. In other words, his parents were poor and Uncle Sammy had to assist in getting from the new country the means of the family's living. However, in doing this he acquired an iron-clad constitution that enables him at his advanced age to walk firmly erect and retain, clear and distinct, the recollections of his early childhood.

At the age of fourteen his parents removed to Henry county, settling near Knightstown, where they remained for two years. From there they moved to Rush county, settling on the banks of Little Blue river. Here at the age of twenty-one he married his first wife, who was Miss Rachael Lieshure. She died in 1857 and he was again married in 1865 to Mrs. Minerva Morris.

VOTED FOR VAN BUREN.

Shortly after coming of age he cast his first vote for Martin Van Buren and, says Uncle Sammy, "I have been a straight Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson democrat ever since and always expect to be." Since then he has voted for every democratic nominee with the exception of Horace Greely and in that campaign, when election day came around, Uncle Sammy simply stayed away from the polls. At the close of the civil war he moved to Boone county and resided there continuously until four years ago, at which time he came to Bluffton. During his stay in Boone county he became a power in the democratic ranks and no question of county politics was decided without his sanction. In the month past a fusion of Boone county democrats, populists and free silver republicans was completed through his agency. Although not able to be there in person, he handled the matter by mail and named over two-thirds of the ticket.

He has attended nearly every state and national convention since becoming a voter and says he will attend the next one if possible. In all his active political career he has held but one office and that was the office of township road supervisor. Time and again he has been promised office and urged to make the race, but he has refused, preferring to serve his party from the ranks rather than at the head.

SUGGESTED THE ROOSTER.

Uncle Sammy claims to be the man who originated the idea of having the rooster as the emblem to be placed at the head of the democratic ticket. In 1856 Thomas Chapman was running a democratic paper in Indianapolis. The party had just won some victory and Uncle Sammy was in the office. Seeing some cuts of crowing roosters he suggested that they be used in the paper and the idea was carried out. Ever after that Chapman used his roosters when the party was victorious and other papers adopted the idea. When the Australian ballot system was put in use so thoroughly had the idea of the "crowing rooster" taken hold of the people that it was naturally selected to head the ticket.

WILL GIVE A SOCIAL SESSION.

The Luther society of St. John's Lutheran church will give a social session at its hall on Washington boulevard next Tuesday evening, and one of the features is to be a peanut hunt, participated in by eighty-eight young people.

FIFTH MODEL CADET MEDAL.

Dr. J. W. Younge, of this city, has just received from the manufacturers the fifth model cadet medal, which he will present to some cadet at Culver Military academy at the close of the school year. The medal is a very handsome creation of gold, a large star inclosed by a gold circlet, suspended from a wide bar by a tricolored ribbon. The inscription is "Model Cadet, Culver Military Academy, 1902." Dr. Younge has presented one of these medals each year for the past five years to the cadet at Culver who stands highest, not alone in his studies, but in the attributes which mark a gentleman.

FINDS RICH TREASURE.

New York, April 12.—W. E. Koch, a jeweler, has, according to a York, Pa., special to the Press, found cash and securities valued at $15,000 in an old chest. Several years ago Koch purchased for a trifling sum at a public sale a small antique chest. Having no immediate use for it he placed it in the garret over his place of business. Finally he decided to use the box and upon taking it apart for repairs a false bottom was found, underneath which was found the hidden wealth. The former owner of the chest is unknown.

SHOOTS DOWN RIVAL.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 12.—Charles Frank, a resident of Birmingham, Ala., was shot and killed yesterday afternoon by Charles Anderson, the divorced husband of the woman Frank married Thursday in this city. The tragedy was the result of jealousy on the part of Anderson, who had been divorced from the woman some time. Frank and his wife met last summer, their acquaintance culminating in marriage. Frank having come from Birmingham Sunday for the event. For the past few weeks Anderson has been threatening to kill Frank. Yesterday, while Frank and his wife were walking toward their home, Anderson came upon them. He was greatly excited. He took hold of the woman's arm and demanded if she had married Frank. Being too frightened to reply, her husband said that she was his wife. Thereupon Anderson drew a revolver and fired two shots into Frank's breast, killing him. Mrs. Frank ran back to her mother's house and Anderson surrendered to the police.

RACE RIOT IN TENDERLOIN.

New York, April 12.—Negroes and whites clashed last night in the heart of the tenderloin district. Twelve or fifteen negroes were badly beaten.

The cause of this small-sized riot was the shooting of Holmes Easley, a young negro, by a bicycle policeman. Easley had some trouble in the neighborhood and was pursued by a crowd. He drew a razor and threatened a policeman who tried to arrest him. The officer drew his revolver. Easley ran and the policeman shot him, the bullet lodging in the negro's leg. A crowd of negroes gathered and threatened the policeman, but they were dispersed by a squad of officers. The wounded negro was removed to a hospital, but for some time afterward there were clashes between negroes and whites on the surrounding streets. No more serious injuries were reported.

RULING ON A DEMURRER.

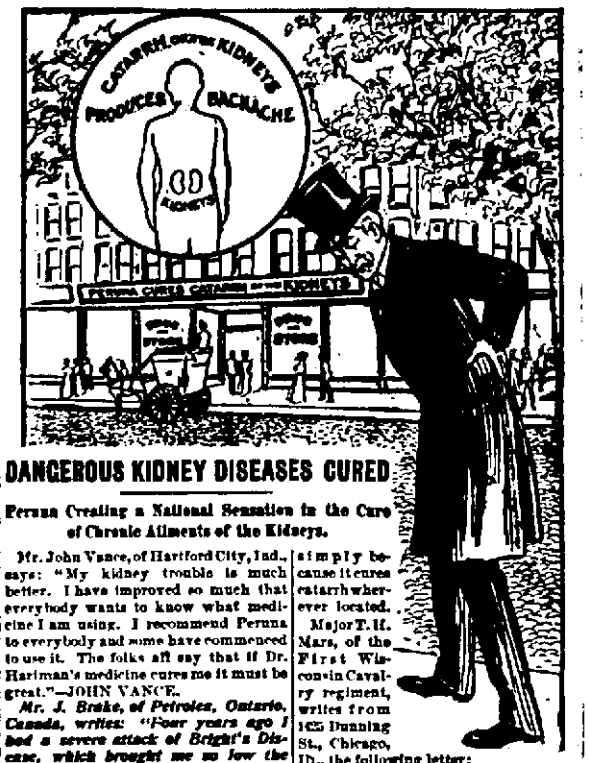

Goshen, Ind., April 12.—In overruling the demurrer of the defendant in the case of David Gooley vs. John E. Fisher, brought to this county from the St. Joseph circuit court on change of venue, Judge Ferrall, of the Elkhart circuit court, yesterday made a ruling of unusual importance. The ruling is in effect that a person who suffers loss through the failure of an attorney to properly look after his legal interests where the course for the attorney to pursue is plain, the attorney can be held responsible for the amount of loss. The plaintiff, David Gooley, was named in the will of his father, Louis Gooley, as the sole devisee. The defendant, John E. Fisher, a well-to-do office lawyer of South Bend, drew the will and signed himself as a witness, the other witnesses accepted by him being Mrs. Gooley, wife of the sole beneficiary under the will. The other heirs contested the will on the grounds that she was not a competent witness, being an interested person, and won their case in the supreme court. David Gooley then sued the attorney for $5,000, the value of the property he forfeited by the breaking of the will. Judge Ferrall yesterday held the complaint good and that Fisher could be held liable, and the attorney must now stand trial.

ANARCHIST SUSPECT RELEASED

Albuquerque, N. M., April 12.—Antonio Maggio, who has been confined in jail at Las Cruces since shortly after the assassination of President McKinley, on suspicion of having knowledge of an anarchist plot against the president's life, has been released. It was said that Maggio, who was a member of the McAndrews Opera company, had predicted the death of President McKinley several months before he was shot at Buffalo. His release was ordered by Judge F. W. Parker, at the request of the United States district attorney, W. C. Reid, and the case dismissed.

PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH OF KIDNEYS EVERY TIME.

DANGEROUS KIDNEY DISEASES CURED

Peruna Creating a National Sensation in the Cure of Chronic Ailments of the Kidneys.

Mr. John Vance, of Hartford City, Ind., says: "My kidney trouble is much better. I have improved so much that everybody wants to know what medicine I am using. I recommend Peruna to everybody and some have commenced to use it. The folks all say that if Dr. Hartman's medicine cures me it must be great."—JOHN VANCE.

Mr. J. Brake, of Petrolea, Ontario, Canada, writes: "Four years ago I had a severe attack of Bright's Disease, which brought me so low the doctor said nothing more could be done for me. I began to take Peruna and Manalin, and in three months I was a well man, and have continued so ever since."—J. Brake.

At the appearance of the first symptom of kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease. It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, preventing the escape of serum from the blood. Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain. It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys simply because it cures catarrh wherever located.

Major T. H. Mars, of the First Wisconsin Cavalry regiment, writes from 1625 Dunning St., Chicago, Ill., the following letter:

"For years I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys contracted in the army. Medicine did not help me any until a comrade who had been helped by Peruna advised me to try it. I bought some at once, and soon found blessed relief. I kept taking it four months, and I am now well and strong and feel better than I have done for the past twenty years, thanks to Peruna."—T. H. Mars.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Practical Philanthropy

One Rich Man Who Does Not Agree With Andrew Carnegie's Ideas.

REV. PETER GENDRON.

Rev. Peter Gendron, of Toledo, O., a retired capitalist and inventor, who gave up the management of his mammoth iron works to search for health and strength, and was cured before he could complete his plans for crossing the ocean, has novel views as to the mission of the rich man. "I would not take a bit of credit away from Andrew Carnegie in his work of founding free libraries," he says, "but my plain American idea of it is that we ought to look after the people's bodies first. If I am able to give ten thousand people pure blood, health and strength, isn't it better than giving them books to read when they don't want to read? I vowed nothing could tempt me back into business when I was cured by Lorenz's Blood Remedy. Now I'm President of the Lorenz Medicine Co., and working night and day to let people know how I was cured. If my time and money can make people well, I'll be content. I get thousands of letters from suffering friends, and I answer them all. Our physician, Dr. Richard Whiteford, gives each case his personal attention by mail. Thousands and thousands of people have taken the medicine, and it would do your heart good to read their letters. As fast as we can we are working from town to town, and we hope it won't be long before Lorenz's Blood Remedy will be in every drug store in the United States."

Mr. Gendron says he can cure the worst cases of Rheumatism, Scrofula, Catarrh, Blood Poisoning, or any ailment arising from impure blood.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR CORONER.

Editor Sentinel:—Please announce my name as a candidate for coroner of Allen county, subject to the decision of the republican nominating convention.

DR. JAMES A. LOMAN.

FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Please announce to the readers of The Sentinel that I am an independent candidate for the office of justice of the peace for Wayne township, subject to the decision of the voters at the polls at the November election. HARRY W. DICKMAN.

IN NORTHERN INDIANA

Police Commissioner R. O. Cotton, of South Bend, is dead.

Laporte county commissioners declined to pay a bounty for wolf scalps.

Geneva will erect a $15,000 school building to replace the structure which burned in December.

Churches at North Manchester have combined in opposition to the plans of the business men to hold a street fair.

Fire at the Studebaker well, just east of Berne, burned up 700 barrels of oil and a large derrick. The loss is $9,500.

Mrs. Luvina Hartman, of Lagro, 79 years of age, is dead from blood poisoning, which resulted from slightly pinching her hand in a wire cutter a week or more ago.

H. B. George, a Lake Shore brakeman, was viciously stabbed and clubbed at Kendallville by three desperate tramps whom he detected in forcing an entrance into a freight car.

The hay barn, corn crib and implement barn of Studebaker, Sale & Co., at Bluffton, were totally destroyed by fire Thursday evening, entailing a loss of $3,500. The fire is believed to have been incendiary in origin.

Mrs. William Cole, of Huntington, is suffering from a painful injury received in an unusual manner. She was attempting to release the family cat, which had been caught in a rat trap, when the animal turned upon her and bit her severely.

State Forrester Will H. Freeman, of Indianapolis, is at Logansport to superintend the planting of a forest of 13,500 trees upon the farm of Quincy A. Myers. For years the energies of the farmers have been directed toward clearing away the trees. Now that the wooded sections are practically gone the system is to be reversed.

Peter Kline, of Huntington, 70 years of age, was bringing a load of hay from his farm when the high wind blew the aged man from his wagon. In the fall he was so badly injured that he lay helpless in the highway for an hour before he was discovered. The accident will render him a cripple for the balance of his days.

WAGE SCALE IS SIGNED.

Youngstown, Ohio, April 12.—A special to the Telegram this morning from Wheeling says: At a conference held here between the officers and wage committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and officials of the Republic Iron and Steel company, the scale for the year beginning July 1, 1902, was signed. The scale signed is that of last year. It affects about 25,000 workers in the bar iron mills of the country. The ante-convention signing of the scale is unheard of, this being the first time that a scale was ever signed before a convention. It remains for that body to ratify the action of the committee, but that is conceded. The agreement means that there will be no strike or shutdown this summer and the doing away with the uncertainties attending a threatened strike. The American Sheet Steel company and American Tin Plate company have been granted the same consideration.

MUNITIONS FOR REBELS.

San Francisco, April 12.—Twenty-five cases of munitions of war were shipped to the Colombian rebels from this port, on the City of Sidney last Tuesday. The consul for Colombia received word from New Orleans that the arms and ammunition were on the way from that city, but did not prevent the shipment on the steamer. He appealed to the collector for the post in the matter. The collector wired to Washington for instructions and today received answer that he should prevent any violation of the neutrality laws. Further shipments are expected and in view of the fact that the authorities of the United States at this port have been advised to take a part in the matter some trouble may be experienced in getting the arms on any outgoing steamer.

MACEDONIANS TO RISE.

Vienna, April 12.—The Neue Freie Presse today publishes a dispatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, announcing that a proclamation has been issued by M. Sarafoff, the Macedonian leader, calling on the Macedonians in Bulgaria to join in a general rising April 27. Bands collecting on the Turkish frontier are to co-operate and invade Turkey at different points.

FRANK PERRY AGAIN CHOSEN

PRESIDENT OF THE INDIANA MASTER HORSESHOERS.

Fort Wayne Man Unanimously Re-elected at Marion—Next Meeting Goes to Evansville.

Frank J. Perry, of this city, has been unanimously re-elected president and organizer of the Indiana Master Horseshoers' association. The honor was conferred upon the well-known Fort Wayne man just before the adjournment of the convention at Marion yesterday, and the local delegates in attendance returned home last evening. Other officers elected were as follows:

First Vice President—George S. Shafer, of Logansport.

Second Vice President—G. D. Marshall, of Indianapolis.

Secretary and Treasurer—William Fimendorf, of Evansville.

Statistician—Wallace Lottridge, of Marion.

Mr. Perry has been untiring in his efforts to promote the welfare of the association, and the honor of a unanimous re-election was richly deserved. The next convention will be held at Evansville.

GRAVE YARD OF SHIPS.

The last vestige of the 996-ton four-masted Norwegian iron sailing ship Mersey, with her cargo of 1,400 tons of South American dyewood for the Yorkshire factories, sank recently beneath the Goodwin quicksands, says the London Mail. She struck the sands, as already reported, early on Sunday morning, nearly opposite Deal.

The crew were saved by the lifeboats, but nothing could be done for the ship. A few hours' rolling on these shifting sands broke her back; then the sand began to swallow her piecemeal; hull and cargo sank foot by foot, until nothing but her masts stood up from the water. She had disappeared by yesterday and left no trace.

Many a score of vessels have gone before her into these depths, but not often so rapidly. Sometimes a mast will stand for a long time like a finger-post pointing the way of destruction. Thus the large sailing ship Hazelbank, wrecked in the same way and on the same spot, kept a mast standing until the recent gales washed it away.

Old tradition says that what is now the Goodwin sands was once the fertile island called Lomea, in the possession of Earl Godwine. From him it passed to the abbey of St. Augustine at Canterbury. The sea always wanted it, and when the abbot, in the extremity of his piety, used the stones intended for the sea wall to build the steeple of Tenterden church, the sea got its chance and utilized it by swallowing the fair isle of Lomea. That final destruction was in 1099, the year before the death of William Rufus. But the sea had been gnawing at Lomea all through the century.

Now the sands are ten miles long stretching northeast and southwest, and one and a half to three miles broad. They lie opposite Sandwich and Deal, and the average distance from the mainland is five and a half miles. They form a natural breakwater to the Downs. At low tide in summer time the sand is firm enough for cricket.

The deadliest day's work of the Goodwin sands was on November 26, 1703, when thirteen men-of-war and 1,200 officers and men perished there.

The sands will hold neither lighthouse nor reason, but there are four fine lightships and many buoys.

Mrs. Robert Harding, of 254 West DeWald street, will entertain the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of Wayne street M. E. church next Friday afternoon at 2:30.

Nicaragua's latest purchase for her navy is the obsolete German war vessel Arminius, which, being twenty years old, was about to be broken up at Hamburg.

THE MARKETS.

Chicago, April 12.—Early speculation in grains today had a decidedly bullish trend. Rains in the growing wheat country were sufficient at the opening to knock prices off a little, but at once the very firm cables and the growing bullish sentiment in the southwestern markets turned the tables on the bears and short accounts had to be covered. May wheat started ⅛@¼c to ⅛@⅛c lower at 73⅜c to 73½c. The dip, however, was only momentary and May surged upwards on a few deals till it sold at 73⅝c. Liquidations eased the market later, but prices hung firmly around 73@73⅛c. Local receipts were light at 28 cars, none of contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 153 cars, making a total for the three points of 186 cars, against 253 last week and 275 a year ago.

Trade in wheat continued active with a strong undertone, but profit-taking retarded the advance and brought occasional slight dips. May closed firm, ⅝@1c higher, at 73⅛c.

Corn pursued the same antics early as did wheat. Although cables were strong May opened only ⅛c higher to unchanged at 59¾c to 59⅝c and there was a tendency to sell short on the recent bulge, but the southwest was strong and receipts continued very small at 63 cars. The country started buying and aided by the wheat strength May corn shot up to 60⅝c.

Corn had almost a runaway market after the first hour. The constant talk of decreasing stocks and the very strong condition of the markets at St. Louis and Kansas City frightened the short interest, and as the country began to buy prices soared. All options were active and excited. May kept advancing and practically at no time had reactions. The close was very strong at the day's top prices—May 1⅞c higher at 61⅛c.

Oats were firm but somewhat quiet early. Corn was the influence, though offerings in May were readily taken. May started ⅛c up at 42⅛c and sold between 42c and 42⅛c. Receipts were 159 cars.

Provisions were quiet but very firm early. Hogs were scarce at the yards and estimates continued to arouse fears of a shortage. The grain bulge also aided in a small upturn. July options were most active. May opened 5c higher at $16.70; May lard a shade up at $9.67½@9.70 and sold to $9.72½, and May ribs unchanged at $8.97½ and advanced to $9.02½.

THE CLOSE.

Prices at the close were as follows.

Wheat—April, 72¾c; May, 73¼c; July, 73⅛@74c; Sept., 73¼c; Dec., 74⅛c.

Corn—April, 61¼c; May, 61⅛c; July, 61⅝@61¾c; Sept., 60⅞c; Dec., 48⅜c.

Oats—April, 41⅜c; May, 42c; July, 34⅞c; Sept., 30¼c; Dec., 30½c.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, April 12.—Opening prices of stocks were a fraction higher all around for Louisville. The sale of 2,500 shares of that stock carried it down from 118¾ to 118, compared with 119⅛ last night, but it immediately rebounded to a shade above last night. Westinghouse Electric rose a point, International Power 1½ and Hocking Valley preferred recovered 1¼ of yesterday's loss. There were thousand-share blocks taken of a number of stocks.

Louisville reached 122¼ and it again had the effect of repressing dealings in other favorites. Its reaction again to below 121 revived the market. Amalgamated, Sugar, and St. Paul reacted ⅜@1⅝, but the Pacifics and Southwesterns were but slightly affected. The Coalers and Southern Railway stocks were bid up. Union Pacific rose a point and there were some sensational gains in the specialties. Chicago and Eastern Illinois advanced 6¾, International Power 3⅞ with a reaction of 2, Evansville and Terre Haute 2½ and Canadian Pacific, Leather preferred, General Electric, Keokuk and Des Moines, Rock Island, Colorado and Southern, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie, United States Rubber and Cotton Oil 1@2¼. Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville declined 1⅛. Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie preferred 1¾, Metropolitan Street Railway 3½ and United States Express 3.

The Colorado and Southern stocks all moved up from 1¼ to 2½, Evansville and Terre Haute 3, Chicago and Eastern Illinois 10¾ and the preferred 2. Westinghouse Electric gained 4½, Wells Fargo 2½, United States Rubber preferred 2¼ and Iowa Central preferred, Keokuk and Des Moines preferred, Virginia-Carolina Chemical, Locomotive, National Biscuit preferred and Bicycle preferred between 1 and 2 points. Metropolitan Street Railway subscription rights fell 2, with a partial recovery and the stock rallied 2½. Pacific Mail fell 1 and New Jersey Central and Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis 2 each. The appearance of the bank statement caused some hardening of prices and Louisville rose to near the top, but ran off again. Selling met the advance elsewhere and the closing was active and irregular.

THE MONEY MARKET.

New York, April 12.—Money on call steady at 4 per cent, closed offered at 4; prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent; sterling exchange steady with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87⅝ for demand and at $4.85@4.85⅛ for 60 days; posted rates, $4.86 and $4.88½; commercial bills, $4.84½@4.85½; bar silver, 53⅝c; Mexican dollars, 43c; government bonds firm; state bonds inactive; railroad bonds strong.

ABOUT THE COURT HOUSE.

The Phoenix Paper company has commenced proceedings against Fisher Bros.; demand, $500.

The case of William Ryan vs. the Phoenix Accident and Sick Benefit association, once tried in the circuit court, has been venued to Huntington county for re-trial.

Mary Frances Jolly has been granted a divorce from Louis C. Jolly.

Ronald Furman, commissioner in the case of Bass vs. Bird, has filed his final report and has been discharged.

Township Trustee Schirmeyer is indisposed and was obliged to go to his home for rest this forenoon.

The circuit court adjourned this afternoon for the term. The court will reconvene a week from Monday, April 21.

The county commissioners today were in session for miscellaneous business. The poor accounts of a number of township trustees were checked up.

In the case of Homer Van Meter vs. Isadore Mautner, judgments against Mautner were rendered today in the superior court, as follows: Nauntauk Silk Co., $46.00; J. & S. Benson, $241.91; M. B. Shantz & Co., $59.15; J. H. Lasher & Co., $445.64; Heckelman-Jackson Co., $323.95; M. Bessinger & Son, $52.35; M. G. Wertheimer, $297.23; Waterhaus & Co., $101.55; Edward Seidel, $164.35, aggregating $1,742.23. Exemption was extended to Mautner in the sum of $550.

Henry Miller, jailed some time ago for embezzling a small sum of money from Wolf & Deissuer, pleaded guilty to petit larceny in the circuit court today and was sentenced to jail for thirty days. He has already served nearly twice that period.

In the matter of Hugh Keegan, trustee for the J. F. Schell company, vs. the Hamilton bank, a motion for a new trial was this afternoon overruled by Judge O'Rourke, and judgment was given the defendant for costs. An appeal was taken.

Louise O. Shondell this afternoon filed a complaint against Charles F. Stahl, charging breach of promise and asking for $3,000 damages. Judge Hench is the plaintiff's attorney and has taken the complaint off file and furthermore refuses to divulge the nature of the specific allegations of the complaint. Stahl is a mail agent on the Pennsylvania road about 31 years of age and the plaintiff is a daughter of Engineer George J. Shondell, of 243 East Wayne street.

Gabriel Moyer has commenced suit against the Wayne Union Suit company for breach of contract claiming damages in the sum of $1,200. Plaintiff alleges that the defendant contracted to sell to plaintiff the sweepings of the factory for a stipulated price. The worth of the sweepings has since increased, wherefore the defendant refuses to comply with the contract to the plaintiff's material financial damage.

In the case of Morrison vs. Melching (sheriff) venued to DeKalb county, the action being for damages by the execution of an attachment, judgment was yesterday given in favor of Melching in the circuit court at Auburn.

ANOTHER ISLE IN THE PACIFIC.

According to advices from Honolulu today by the Gaelic, Uncle Sam has his flag over another island that is of sufficient size—five miles long by two in width—to be an important possession and which may be used for any one of the countless purposes that islands are considered by imperialists to be good for—coaling station, cable landing, "bases for naval operations." This new bit of sea-girt land is only eight hundred miles from Yokohama and is known as Marcus island. At present it bears a rich deposit of guano that is to be marketed shortly by Capt. Andrew Rosehill, Walter G. Peacock and Thomas Fitch, of Honolulu.

On June 29, 1889, Capt. Andrew A. Rosehill—now assistant harbor master at Honolulu—was in command of a small trading schooner in the south seas. He visited Marcus island and claimed it in the name of the United States. On his return to Honolulu in October, 1890, he attempted to secure title to the guano deposits on the island, through John L. Stevens, the American minister to the kingdom of Hawaii. James G. Blaine was then secretary of state, and in response to the application he replied, under date of January 10, 1890:

"Captain Rosehill's papers will be placed on file, but it seems proper to state that in the judgment of the department they do not constitute sufficient proof that such island, rock or key was not, at the time of the discovery thereof or of taking possession and occupation thereof by the claimants, in the possession or occupation of any other government or of the citizens of any other government, before the same shall be considered as appertaining to the United States."

Subsequent efforts made by Captain Rosehill to obtain title to Marcus island were for one reason and another unsuccessful, and it appeared to be tied up in red tape at the department of state beyond the power of extrication.

But Captain Rosehill persevered, and at last he succeeded in interesting W. C. Peacock, who thereupon enlisted the services of Col. Thomas Fitch, whose efforts resulted, it is claimed, in fixing the sovereignty of this country over Marcus island.

The island is about 800 miles southeast of Yokohama, about 800 miles north-northeast of Guam and about 2,500 miles west from Honolulu. The first official recognition of its existence is found in a book called "The Seaman's Guide to the Islands of the North Pacific," published in 1870 in London by James Imray & Son.—San Francisco Bulletin.

CLOTHES PINS NOT NEEDED.

A "pinless clothesline" is the invention of Byron W. Knight, of McFall, Mo. It consists of a series of elongated wire loops, partly twisted and so formed as to accomplish its object in view. The clothes to be hung up are inserted through loops, which are placed at intervals and, being "pushed at the same time between the partly twisted shank portions of the links, are securely held." This device will be a boon to housewives, and especially to laundry maids.

We Are Not Alarmists!

Would Simply Direct Your Attention to Serious Symptoms Experienced by Thousands.

They Truly Indicate Terrible and Deadly Kidney Disease.

Paine's Celery Compound

Has Cured the Most Desperate Cases and Will Assuredly Banish Your Trouble

While we would not play the part of alarmists and seek to frighten people by declaring that a large majority of them are already victims of kidney diseases, and liable to be hurried into untimely graves by them, still the very noticeable increase of kidney diseases in recent years, and their virulent power, is a subject that is constantly engaging the attention of the ablest medical investigators.

Have you pain in the small of the back, of dull, dragging nature, but often acute and severe? Is the urine in a disordered state, sometimes pale in color and very copious, at other times high colored and scanty, with brick sediment or with settling of mucous, offensive and foul smelling? Have you a general feeling of lassitude and weakness? Do you recognize the fact that you are unable to perform the same amount of mental or physical work that you got through with months ago?

Any one of the symptoms mentioned point unmistakably to deadly kidney disease in some form. Do not delay until it is too late. If you value life, begin this very day with Paine's Celery Compound; it is your only hope of success and safety. By the use of this wonderful remedy tens of thousands are now enjoying perfect health who once were victims of treacherous kidney diseases. Read carefully the testimony of Mr. Albert Bowers, 84 North 13th St., Newark, N. J.:

"Some two years ago I suffered with kidney disease, during which time I had two doctors, neither of whom could do me any good. It was not until I used Paine's Celery Compound that I found relief. I had no strength, energy or ambition, and was nervous and irritable. I was all run down and lost about forty pounds. I felt that the end was near, when a friend suggested Paine's Celery Compound, and I have this great medicine to thank for my restoration to health."

HIS LEGS CRUSHED

WENDLIN FRIEDMANN FRIGHTFULLY INJURED.

BIG CASTING FALLS ON HIM

NOW LIES AT HOSPITAL IN CRITICAL CONDITION.

CARS FOR THE C. A. & C. ROAD

PENNSYLVANIA SHOPS ARE TO BUILD THIRTY-FOUR.

Wendlin Friedmann is lying at St. Joseph hospital with injuries which may result fatally. Mr. Friedmann was injured at the Bass foundry, where he is a member of the casting cleaning gang, under Foreman Casper Weidemann. At 10 o'clock this morning the men were about to transfer the base frame of a dynamo, which weighed about 3,500 pounds, from the pile of castings at the door of the foundry room to the truck to convey it to the cleaning room, when the chain of the crane broke and the heavy piece dropped back upon another casting which laid on an incline, and then slid down against Mr. Friedmann, catching him between it and another casting and crushing his right leg almost to a pulp. Comrades went to the assistance of the unfortunate man and he was relieved from the heavy weight that was pressing him down, and later taken to St. Joseph hospital, where Drs. A. J. Kesler and C. B. Stemen now have him in charge. The surgeons found that Mr. Friedmann's right leg was crushed at the hip and that the arteries and tendons were severed, and that he was also badly injured internally. The man was so weak that it was decided to await reaction before operating upon the wounded limb, which must come off at the hip. If he lives until 4 o'clock and the conditions are favorable to survival of the operation, the limb will be taken off at that hour. Friedmann is in a most critical condition, however, and the attending surgeons have little hope for his recovery. He is a married man and has five or six children, Charles W. Friedmann, the eldest, being a clerk at the Meinzen drug store, on Maumee road. He has been employed at the Bass foundry for ten years and is a sober, hard-working man. The accident was very peculiar and unaccountable. The chain which broke and caused the accident was in use only a few weeks and was considered perfectly safe. It had been used in lifting castings that weighed three times as much as the one which was being handled when the links parted.

ANOTHER IMMIGRANT TRAIN.

A three-coach train, loaded with immigrants, passed through the city over the Nickel Plate at 8 o'clock last evening. The passengers represented almost every nation of the globe. That well known linguist, Conductor Charles W. Ziegler, had charge of the train and his familiarity with the varied tongues of his wards put him in great demand. The immigrants were en route to the northwest, where they will soon become a valuable acquisition to the farming communities.

WILL BUILD A CHURCH.

Grotheltman & Company have been awarded the contract for building a brick church at Woodburn, Ind., for the German Lutheran congregation of that village and neighborhood. The contractors have already commenced getting the material on the ground for the building and will put a large force of men at work upon the job as soon as possible.

WILL REPAIR LOCOMOTIVES.

The Bass Foundry and Machine company will repair some locomotive boilers for the Detroit Southern road. Two will arrive here next week for new fire boxes and flews. They will be stripped of pilot, tank and cab, but will rest upon their own wheels. The railway company's shop facilities are inadequate, hence the sending of this work to the Bass shops.

WORKING TWELVE HOURS.

An accident to one of the planers in the Pittsburg planing mills has made it necessary to run the other planers twelve hours per day. The broken piece of machinery has been forwarded to the tool manufacturers and as soon as repairs are made and the machine ready for operation, the men will return to the ten hour schedule.

WILL ASK FOR FRANCHISE.

The Wabash company has again petitioned the city council of Pittsburg for a franchise into that city and the prospects for favorable action are better than they were on former efforts in this direction. Concerning the matter the Pittsburg Gazette says: "The old ordinance, introduced nearly a year ago, granting these rights, has died with the old councils without being reported from committee. Hence the application for franchises will be made again. This ordinance is now being prepared by the representatives of the Wabash, J. W. Patterson, the chief engineer of the Pittsburg, Carnegie and Western, and A. M. Neeper, counsel for the Wabash at Pittsburg. Under the old ordinance the rights asked for included only the privilege of crossing the streets on elevated tracks on a private right of way from the corner of Ferry and Water streets, along the west side of Ferry street to Liberty avenue. The new ordinance will go further, providing also for the proposed line to Allegheny, notice of the intention to build which was filed with the director of public works last summer. The fate of the old ordinance is not expected to be shared by the new one. The old one was referred to the corporations committee and thence to a special sub-committee, in which it died by neglect certainly intentional. There will be a new corporations committee, a majority of its members being from common councils, which is strongly citizens' in political complexion. As the citizens' candidates during the last campaign publicly promised support of the Wabash in its efforts to reach terminals here, it is believed this support will be given at once. Upon the introduction of the Wabash ordinance it will be referred to the corporations committee. Its report favorably from that committee will soon follow, according to general belief."

FAT NERVES.

A whirl of excitement was recently caused in the scientific world by the news that the mystery of nerve action has been solved.

It is announced that healthy nerves are fat nerves—and that it is the fat in the core of the nerve which is sensitive and by hardening and softening creates nerve action.

Maybe this explains why Scott's Emulsion has always been such a remarkable remedy for nervousness.

Scott's Emulsion feeds thin nerves with the best of all fats, the pure cod-liver oil and strengthens them with the best of nerve tonics, the hypophosphites.

For all forms of nervousness and neuralgia take Scott's Emulsion.

HAD A THUMB CRUSHED.

Julius Koch, machinist, had a most painful accident at the Pittsburg shops this morning. While he was operating a lathe, he got his left thumb caught between a nut upon the machine and the frame and the nail was torn from its socket, carrying a good portion of the fleshy part of the end of the thumb with it.

CARS FOR THE C., A. & C. ROAD.

The Pennsylvania shops in this city have received instructions to build thirty-four cars for the Cleveland, Akron and Columbus road and work upon the order will be taken up as soon as the order for sixty-five stock cars, which is now well under way, has been disposed of. Thirty-one of the C. A. & C. cars will be box cars of the XH pattern, mounted upon 60,000 pound capacity trucks, and three of them will be the standard stock car. The C. A. & C. road is a recent acquisition, upon which the Pennsylvania company is expending a great deal of attention and money in bringing it up to the prevailing standard of the company's lines.

ABANDON THE PROJECT.

Warsaw, Ind., April 12.—A. A. Reynolds, representing Sol C. Dickey, secretary and general manager of the Winona Assembly, last night withdrew the application of the latter for a franchise for an electric railroad between Warsaw and Winona lake. His action was taken in view of the opposition of the Logansport, Rochester and Northern Traction company, which has a five-year franchise over the streets desired by the Winona people. Rather than engage in a legal fight, which would make the construction of the road this spring impossible, Dr. Dickey ordered Mr. Reynolds to withdraw his application.

GALLOWAY RESIGNS.

A. Galloway, for eleven years superintendent of the Cincinnati and Indianapolis division of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, has tendered his resignation, effective May 1, but has requested that he be relieved from duty on April 19, as he wishes to attend the meeting in New York on the 23d of the American Railway association. As soon as well rested he expects to return to railroad work. It is understood that the divisions will be separated, each division to have a superintendent.

JAMES FRED RESIGNS.

James Fred has resigned his position at the Wabash boiler shops and will go to Indianapolis to take a position in the Big Four shops. Mr. Fred's father, who resides in Indianapolis, is in poor health and has requested his son to come home. It is on this account that the change is being made.

BLACKSMITH HURT.

William Doell, a blacksmith at the Wabash shops, had the flesh stripped from the inside of the index finger this morning. He was cutting a piece of iron with the big steam shears, when the piece he held tilted up and caught the finger between it and the frame of the shears with the mentioned result.

THE CONDUCTORS' SOCIAL.

The social last evening at 138 Calhoun street, given jointly by the Order of Railway Conductors and the Ladies' Auxiliary, was a pleasant affair, as are all social functions given by these ladies and gentlemen. In the pedro contest Miss McCarthy and William Smart carried off the first prize and Mrs. P. J. Devitt and Conductor Sherman Mayers played good enough to capture the consolation prizes.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Nickel Plate engine 102 has gone to the Stony Island shops for light repairs.

Yard Brakeman Thomas Hayes, of the Nickel Plate, is off duty on account of sickness.

Nickel Plate Conductor W. W. Harper, of Bellevue, attended the O. R. C. entertainment last night.

J. O. Langston and Fred Lents are sick and H. C. Kammeyer is taking a lay off to look after private business.

B. B. Branson and J. Stover are sick and off duty. They are trucknen at the Pittsburg freight house.

B. W. Shaw resumed work in the Pittsburg smith shop this morning, after an absence of several days on account of sickness.

A special train carrying the Richard Mansfield theatrical company will pass through the city tomorrow morning over the Wabash road.

Conductor E. W. Hindel is sick and Conductor M. E. Baum and Brakeman H. E. Baum are each off duty on account of sickness in their families.

Business men of Fowler are laboring earnestly to induce the promoters of the Cincinnati, Richmond and Muncie road to locate their shops at that point.

Contracts have been let by the Pennsylvania for enlarging and improving the already extensive yards at Altoona, Pa. In the new improvements $630,000 will be expended.

Fred Tagtmeyer, of the organ factory, received an ugly gash in his left instep yesterday. A heavy chisel fell from the work bench and the sharp edge entered the foot, as stated.

The Queen and Crescent, catering to the wishes of the majority of the patrons of the road, will take charge of its dining car service and employ white men as porters in place of negroes.

Dr. Stemen was called upon yesterday to attend L. L. Gloyd, a freight handler at the Pittsburg warehouse. Some boxes had fallen and in their descent they cut several holes in Mr. Gloyd's scalp.

The Train Dispatchers' Association of America will hold its annual convention in Pittsburg the third week in June. The committee of arrangements for the affair announce that indications point to an attendance of 1,000.

The committee appointed to call on the Rock Island officials to ascertain why the road withdrew from the Western Passenger association, received the answer that it was done on "legal advices," and there need be no further effort made to bring it back into the organization.

News of the affliction which has fallen to the lot of A. J. Tou was sorrowfully received by the Nickel Plate employes yesterday. "A. J.," as the boys always spoke of Mr. Tou, was employed as an engineer on that road for several years and he was held in high esteem by his fellow enginemen.

All important lines are asking for bids on furniture cars. All the roads are short of equipment suitable for shipping furniture, carriages and agricultural implements. The reason is that shippers desire to take advantage of the maximum weight allowed, and they cannot do this with the ordinary box car.

F. Unger, a brass moulder in the Allegheny shops of the Pennsylvania company, arrived in the city last night and is now stopping with his parents. Mr. Unger scratched one of his fingers slightly a few days ago and later got some poison in the wound. As a result he has a very sore hand, which will disable him for awhile.

Louis Waltemath, a machinist, resigned his position at the Electric works this morning.

J. L. Turnbull, a checkman at the Pittsburg freight house, fell and bruised a leg several days ago, but continued at work until this morning, when the injured limb was so painful that he had to quit work.

Alfred Bredham, a tinner, lately employed in the Grand Trunk shops at Port Huron, Mich., arrived in the city yesterday and this morning commenced work in Foreman Neuroth's department of the Wabash shops. F. W. Trarbach, a boilermaker, also took a position at the Wabash shops.

Michael Kelleher, of the Pittsburg round house, brought to that establishment a lot of cigars for the "boys" this morning. He also carried to them the information that Mrs. Kelleher had presented him with a twelve pound baby boy and this bit of news was imparted with feelings of pride, for the little fellow has no superior in this city.

The Santa Fe is having built at the Baldwin locomotive works some unique freight locomotives. They have six driving wheels sixty-nine inches in diameter, and in emergency will do for passenger engines. In working order the engine proper weighs 190,000 pounds, and by the use of the traction increasers can add 20,000 pounds to the weight on the driving wheels.

President Joseph Ramsey, of the Wabash, who has returned to St. Louis after several weeks' stay in the east, says that the company is not seeking an Atlantic outlet at Baltimore, but that it is after a full share of the coal business in the coal states. It is Mr. Ramsey's belief that the purchase of the Western Maryland road is off, at least for some time, all bids having been refused by the city of Baltimore.

Mrs. Harriett H. Davisson, special agent for the United States department of labor, who has been in the city for two or three weeks gathering statistics, left today for her home. The lady visited all the shops in the city and was very successful in getting aid from the clerks and others who would probably have been less free to offer their services were the solicitor a man. Mrs. Davisson is a very intelligent old lady and has, evidently, had a vast experience in the work she is now engaged in.

BROKE WORLD'S RECORD.

New York, April 12.—Heatherbloom, the high jumping horse, has broken the world's record at the riding academy horse show in this city, by clearing the bar at 7 feet, 8 inches. The former record was 7 feet, 4½ inches. Heatherbloom's previous mark. The academy was well filled with society people and there was a roar of applause over the wonderful performance.

SYRUP OF FIGS

Acts Gently;
Acts Pleasantly;
Acts Beneficially;
Acts truly as a Laxative.

Syrup of Figs appeals to the cultured and the well-informed and to the healthy, because its component parts are simple and wholesome and because it acts without disturbing the natural functions, as it is wholly free from every objectionable quality or substance. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinal virtues of Syrup of Figs are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinally laxative and to act most beneficially.

PROGRAM FOR THE REUNION

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR THE SULTANA SURVIVORS.

A Very Interesting Time Has Been Arranged—The Program is Given in Full.

All the arrangements for the first Indiana reunion of the Sultana survivors have now been completed, the program has been carefully prepared and is now published in detail for the first time. A perusal of it will show to what pains the old soldiers of Fort Wayne have been to give the survivors of that awful tragedy a fitting reception in Fort Wayne upon the occasion of their first visit to Indiana on Tuesday, April 29. Mr. Louis Schirmeyer, township trustee of Wayne township, is the only survivor living in this city, or in fact in this section of Indiana and upon him developed the work of inaugurating the movement which has so happily terminated in such perfect and complete arrangements. For the assistance so liberally given him in the work by his old comrades in arms and by the younger military organizations, he feels truly grateful and for the substantial financial aid necessary to make the affair a success he feels also especially grateful, more so in consideration of the fact that the contributors can not hope for any return in a pecuniary or commercial way for their contributions, as the survivors who will be present can scarcely number over thirty-five or forty. Following is the general plan of battle:

DAY SESSION.

10:00 a. m.—Business session—assembly room, court house.

2:30 p. m.—Tour of city in carriages, for sight seeing, visiting the various parks.

5:00 p. m.—Banquet at Standard hall.

7:30 p. m.—Short parade from court house to Stengerbund hall. Sultana survivors, headed by City band and escorted by Union Veteran Legion, Sion S. Bass Post, Anthony Wayne Post and Henry W. Lawton Post, G. A. R.; Lawton Camp, Spanish American War Veterans; J. B. White Camp, Sons of Veterans; Walker Camp, Sons of Veterans. Major Walter W. Barnett, marshal.

BANQUET PROGRAM.

Toastmaster, Comrade Judge S. M. Hench.

"Our Country," response by Samuel M. Foster.

"The Sultana Survivors, Our Guests," Hon. William H. Shambaugh, city attorney.

"The Army and Navy During the Rebellion," response by Comrade E. J. Kennedy, Berea, Ohio.

The exercises at the banquet will be enlivened by music appropriate to the occasion.

CAMP FIRE PROGRAM.

Bugle Call, "The General."

Music, "National Airs," City band.

8:00 p. m. Introductory address by presiding officer, Hon. Robert B. Taylor, member of the Mississippi River commission.

Address of Welcome, Mayor Henry C. Berghoff.

Response, Comrade Dr. W. P. Madden, Xenia, Ohio.

Song, "Soldiers Joy." (Neuman), Haydn, Linden and Apollo quartets.

Music, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," City Band.

Address, Lieutenant Governor Newton W. Gilbert.

Song, "Comrades in Arms," (Adams), Haydn, Linden and Apollo quartets.

Bugle Call, "Assembly."

Exhibition of views of Sultana disaster, with lecture by Comrade S. H. Raudebaugh, of Linsey, Ohio.

Six paintings, 10x12 feet in size. 1. Andersonville prison. 2. Embarking troops at Vicksburg. 3. Sultana steaming up the river, loaded. 4. The explosion. 5. The Sultana on fire and terrible sights surrounding it. 6. About to sink, rescue of those floating down the stream.

Music, "Soldier's Dream," City band.

Personal experiences by the boys.

Music, "Star Spangled Banner," City band.

Bugle call.

Taps.

A SAFE PLACE.

AT THE PAPE FURNITURE STORE YOU GET FULL VALUE.

Finest Display of Furniture Ever Shown in Northern Indiana.

Each season the furniture manufacturers seem to out-do their efforts of the previous season in beauty of design and elegance of finish, and this spring every previous season has been eclipsed. Never in the history of the furniture trade has there been such a profusion of patterns and such a variety of styles in finishing. Every natural beauty in the mahogany, oak and maple has been brought out prominently, and at no place in northern Indiana can the various styles in their completeness be seen better than at the Pape Furniture Company's salesrooms, 126, 128 and 130 East Berry street.

In this, Fort Wayne's greatest furniture store, is shown not one piece of a kind, but scores of pieces of every sort of furniture that goes to make up the well furnished home. From the parlor to the kitchen nothing is omitted. For the parlor there is everything that could be suggested, from the full suite to the rare odd pieces that are the delight of every woman's heart—exclusive designs that she need not fear seeing in every other parlor that she may enter. Large, easy leather upholstered chairs and richly carved tables for the library; book cases of the latest design. In dining room furniture there is everything you can think of, and the massive sideboards and tables give an air of elegance that has to be seen to be fully appreciated. There are scores of different patterns in sideboards, tables and chairs, and the pocketbook of all can be suited, from the millionaire to the man that earns but a moderate salary, and in each instance the price is the lowest consistent with the standard quality of the goods. In bedroom furniture there is everything that goes toward the furnishing of this most important part of a home.

Nothing has been overlooked that will add to the elegance and comfort of the home and the price on each is the lowest consistent with the quality of the goods. The Pape Furniture company handles nothing but the output of the best furniture factories of the country, and the purchaser can rest assured that here he buys no cheap penitentiary-made goods nor runs th risk of getting furniture that has been sold before on the installment plan and re-possessed again on account of the purchaser failing to pay his monthly installment, and thus endangering the life of the family by bringing into the home contagious diseases, for who can tell where it was sold before and what kind of a house it came out of. These are things that should be taken into consideration in the purchasing, and at no place in this city can you buy with greater safety or feel more confident that you are getting the greatest value for your money than at the Pape Furniture Company, 126-130 East Berry street.

Rev. Henry Juengel, of Onaga, Kas., is visiting relatives in the city for a few days.

E. F. Yarnelle and Charles Worden have returned from Indianapolis, where they attended a meeting of the board of directors of Winona assembly.

The Mulqueen dancing academy will give its annual penny fair on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of the coming week. Work has already begun upon the decorations, booths and ornamentation, which will be on a very elaborate scale.

SEVENTEEN-YEAR LOCUSTS

GREAT SWARM OF STRANGEST OF ALL INSECTS TO APPEAR NEXT MONTH—INDIANA STORM CENTER.

Warnings are being sent out by the state commissioners of agriculture all over the northern and eastern parts of the United States against the great swarm of seventeen-year locusts which will make its appearance next month.

According to the locust map prepared in Washington, Indiana is to turn loose countless swarms of the insects which have been for seventeen years awaiting the time of their release from the long embrace of the soil. The map shows Indiana to have the largest locust area of any single state in the union and it comprehends practically the whole state. Maryland comes next in its promises of a large product and Pennsylvania follows close, while Ohio, Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois, Michigan and several other states are marked on the map as places where the swarms will issue from the ground.

After sleeping underground for nearly two decades, the insects will come out in May in enormous numbers, and fruit growers especially will have reason to fear for the safety of their trees.

This is the weirdest and in some respects the most interesting, of all insects. No other known insect lives for anything like so long a time, and surely nothing can be more strange than a habit which requires an animal to spend so extended a period in solitude in a subterranean cell, the whole of the open-air career of the seventeen-year cicada, as it is properly called, comprising only a few days.

It is not surprising that the Indians anciently should have attributed to the creature baneful influences, though they used to eat the cicadas, gathering them in great quantities and preparing them for the table by roasting in a hot oven. Even civilized people are apt to be dismayed by its sudden appearances in armies seemingly innumerable. Fear of its supposed dangerous "sting" has been widespread at such times, and in some cases fruits have been avoided in the notion that they were stung and poisoned. Drinking water has actually been under suspicion for the same cause, absurd as it may seem.

Filling the ground from which they issue with countless exit holes, swarming over trees and shrubs, and making the air vibrate with their shrill, discordant notes, the locusts leave obvious marks of their presence in the small wounds made for the purpose of depositing eggs which cover all the smaller twigs and branches. Though no serious harm is done to forest trees, fruit trees and young nursery stock are liable to suffer considerably.

The young ant-like larvae hatched from the eggs escape from the wounded limbs, drop lightly to the ground and quickly burrow out of sight, each one forming for itself a little subterranean chamber over some rootlet, where it remains through winter and summer, buried and solitary, in this manner passing the seventeen years of its underground existence, while preparing for a few weeks only of the society of its fellows and the enjoyment of the sunshine and fragrant air of early summer.

With perfect regularity, at the end of the allotted period millions on millions of the insects attain maturity at almost the same moment. For four or five weeks the winged male sings his song of love and courtship, and the female busies herself with the placing of eggs which are to produce a fresh generation seventeen years later. For nearly two centuries there is record of the recurrence of the cicada at seventeen-year intervals, the first written note on the subject having been made in 1715. The last appearance of the swarm was in 1885, so that the next one is due in 1902. There are other swarms of locusts which turn up every year at different places, but the one expected next month is by far the largest.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of the cicada to the popular mind is its musical apparatus, by means of which it produces its peculiar note, or song. Only the male has the gift of song, and the mechanism that makes the sound consists of two small drums of membrane situated on the sides of the abdomen. These drums are caused to vibrate by the action of powerful muscles, and the noise is varied in tone and pitch by adjacent structures resembling sounding boards. The manner in which the sound is produced may be compared to the pressing up and down of the bottom of a somewhat bulged tin pan.

The "periodical cicada" belongs to the great order of sucking insects, familiar to the public under the name of "bugs," and which includes, in addition to some graceful and attractive species, like the seventeen-year locust, such foul-smelling species as the squash bugs, plant bugs and certain animal parasites. The cicadas, however, are not only beautiful, but unobjectionable in their habits, unless the damage they do to fruit trees and occasionally to other plants is to be seriously considered. Some kinds of them measure over 6 inches in expanse of wings. That the fear of their stinging is groundless and imaginary need hardly be said; they can not even defend themselves against an ant or fly.

When the spring of the appointed year arrives the locusts emerge from the ground with a rush, as it were, and climb upon every available tree or other elevation. They are in such vast numbers that one can not step on the ground anywhere without crushing several as they come out of their holes. The unanimity with which all those that rise within a certain radius of a given tree crawl in a bee-line to the trunk of that tree is most interesting. Scrambling over the ground, they all converge to one central point, and then in a steady stream scramble up the trunk, diverging again on the branches.

They begin to come out of the ground at sunset and continue until about 9 o'clock when the majority of them have emerged. After ascending the tree trunk they crawl along the branches and fasten themselves in a secure position, where they proceed to transform.

In escaping from the soil the insect burrows directly upward, and under ordinary conditions, emerges directly, leaving a small round hole about the size of a man's little finger. Under certain circumstances, however, the pupae constructs little cones, or chimneys, of earth above the surface of the soil, capping them over and occupying them for several weeks before the time of issuing. These structures, which have been variously called "huts," "towers," "chimneys" and "adobe dwellings," are most curious, and sometimes millions of them will be found in a small space of ground.

Being entirely helpless, the locusts are a prey to many enemies. Birds devour immense numbers of them, and English sparrows are very fond of them. early all of those which come out of the ground in and about cities are gobbled by the sparrows. But the greatest check on the multiplication of the species has been the clearing of woodlands and the growing settlement of the country—a cause that threatens the eventual extermination of these creatures.

AMERICAN BOOKBINDERS.

Some of the best known English authors, according to the London Publishers' Circular, have risen up in rebellion against modern British bookmaking. They call it names, such as "cheap," "shoddy," "vulgar" and "very deficient." Attention has frequently been called to the superiority of our American bookbinding, and comparisons, odious to the British side of the question, have been drawn between the English and American bookbinders. Now the authors themselves have risen to speak their minds on the subject. Among them, Mr. Gilbert Parker, author of "The Right of Way," has pronounced outright in favor of the American bindings, which, he says, are far more "artistic, original and tasteful in the United States than in England," although he prefers the English printing to the American.

HOT WATER HEATED BY GAS.

Hot water radiators, heated by gas, are one of the last developments in gas heating for public halls and private houses. These are made with different capacities, to suit the particular needs of the case. The radiators are self-contained, consisting of the gas burner and the several sections containing the water. These are filled through a suitable opening at the top. An expansion siphon constitutes one end section, and the burner the other. In this radiator a hot closet is formed above the water section. This design is intended for dining halls and dining-rooms. The gas consumption of the size recommended for a sixteen-foot square room is said to be about eight cubic feet per hour, which, at prevailing prices for gas, represents an expenditure of less than 1 cent.

BOOK BUYING INCREASING.

Formerly the buying of a book was a matter of considerable importance. It was felt to be a bit of extravagance, and expenditure which was easily avoidable. Books could be borrowed or taken from a library; they were pleasant things to have about; they gave an air of refinement and intelligence to a room or a house; but it was easy to get along without them. People bought tickets for a concert, a lecture, for the opera or the theater, and thought it entirely legitimate to spend a little money for recreation and refinement. When these same people thought of buying a book which cost no more than a single ticket to a concert, and not half as much as a ticket to an opera, they hesitated. They were not in the habit of buying books, and they were in the habit of buying tickets to all kinds of entertainments; that was the difference. Now people have formed the habit both of reading and buying books; it does not seem to them any more extravagant to pay a dollar or a dollar and a quarter for a novel than for a concert ticket.—Ladies' Home Journal.

NEW WOMAN AT A FIRE

Somebody has remarked on the business-like way in which the girls of Bryn Mawr college conducted themselves at the fire in that institution, says the Washington Times. The hall which was burned was one of the dormitories, and contained the possessions of numerous young women. They did not scream, or faint, or lose their heads, but took their places in the fire brigade and worked so effectively that the fire was extinguished without anybody being hurt, and without excessive damage to the property. Moreover, fifteen of the candidates for the degree of Ph. D. succeeded in saving their theses, which proves that the Scripture question, "Can a maid forget her ornaments?" may possibly be answered, "Yes, if she happens to be thinking more about something else."

The same kind of courage and coolness was shown two or three years ago at the burning of Mount Holyoke college. In that case the whole building was burned, but most of the property of the students was saved by their unaided exertions. This fact is the more remarkable when it is noted that the building was five stories high, housed 300 or more students and was old-fashioned in its construction, so that the fire quickly gained headway. It was impossible to save the building, but no lives and no heads were lost, and not many wardrobes.

Like a good many other varieties of feminine efficiency, this is the result not of determination or eccentricity, but of circumstances. It is unlikely that women will ever aspire to position in the fire department of a big city, but they can fight fire when they have to, and they are trained, in the large women's colleges, to do so as effectively as possible. A fire drill is part of the routine of most of these institutions. When several hundred girls are gathered in a settlement by themselves, it is highly desirable that they should not all go distracted in case a fire breaks out.

A RARE CACTUS BLOOM.

While there are quite a number of species of the cactus in horticultural hall, in Audubon park, and many of these have bloomed, the blossoms excelling probably any other plant in beauty and size, yet there was one, known as the "cereus gigantius grandi florus," which up to the present time has not shown any blossom, although fully twenty-five years old.

The plant, as its name implies, is a very large one and runs up alongside one of the pillars supporting the cupola of the hall, being on the down-town side of the pool in the center of the hall. One morning last week a huge bulb made its appearance on one side of the plant near the top, which is about twenty feet from the ground. Like all cacti, the bud or bulb increased in size quite rapidly and at dusk several brilliant colors peeped forth from between the cracks in the green covering of the embryotic flower.

The bud was fully ten inches long and about five inches in diameter. The flower when open showed various colors, being equipped with three rows of petals, each of a different hue and each color or row of petals being visible from below the flower. The stamen was of a most delicate shade of golden yellow, while in the center was a dark green stem on which grew a perfect snow-white star with a marked and brilliant edging of royal purple. The center of this star was carmine. This exquisite blossom remained open about twenty-four hours.—New Orleans Picayune.

A MAGNETIC MOUNTAIN.

The story in the "Arabian Nights" of the mysterious lodestone mountain which drew the nails out of ships that approached near enough, has a certain foundation in fact, only the fact has suffered by expansion. On the coast of Norway, near Joedern, there is a sand dune of nearly three-quarters of a mile in length. The sand is mixed with particles of lodestone, and when a ship comes in the vicinity the compass becomes irregular and the vessel is entangled in a kind of whirlpool and thrown ashore.

An Austrian physician has invented a powder known as antisputol, which experiment is stated to have shown to be capable of destroying the bacteria causing tuberculosis, typhoid fever and diphtheria.

THE SALOON IN RUSSIA

How the Czar Has Solved a Hard Problem in His Dominions—Benefits the People.

(Dr. Gabriel Marcou in the Chicago American.)

The imperial ukase in regard to government monopoly in the sale of liquor was issued in the four oriental departments of the Russian empire on January 1, 1895, and three years later it was made law in thirty-five more "governments."

It was to diminish the consumption of liquor that the Russian government made the manufacture of alcohol a government monopoly. And not only this, but the state is the only dealer in alcohol, and whatever is sold is strictly pure and unadulterated. All over Russia you will find the sign:

"Liquor depot No. —," and if you go inside one of these you will see a counter protected by brass wire netting reaching to the ceiling, as in a bank. There are no tables or chairs. Not a bottle is in sight.

Three different kinds of liquor, measuring 95 degrees, 90 degrees and 40 degrees, are sold. The last is the vodka. The salesman, or oftener the saleswoman, is employed by the state. The customer comes in, buys his bottle, pays and leaves. He is not allowed to drink any in the place.

These places are open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. No liquor is sold to intoxicated persons, children or private soldiers.

The customer goes away with his bottle and ordinarily hardly reaches the street before the cork is out and the liquor gulped down. It is against the law to drink in the street, but if there is a policeman near he will always look the other way.

The result of this reform, that was forced upon the people and has been in effect for some years, has not been quite what was expected. Financially it has been a success, bringing a lot of money into the hands of the government, but the people do not drink perceptibly less and the consumption is now again increasing. The last nine months of the year 1901 show an increase in revenue of $12,000,000 over the same months in the preceding year.

Special permits to sell liquor are given to cafes and restaurants, but no higher price may be charged than at the government depositories, and as this price allows no profit, you can get no drink without ordering a meal.

In restaurants that have no permit to sell liquor you can get it, none the less, if you are known to the waiter, who will then pour it in a cup from a teapot.

To help along the temperance movement the government helps to support eating houses, coffee houses, reading rooms and even public places of amusement all over the empire.

In St. Petersburg the government has erected a building called "Czar Nicholas II.'s house for the people," a building that is without peer in the world, a splendid construction of steel and stone, ornamented with graceful columns, inviting loggias and imposing domes, situated in a beautiful park along the Neva.

If you go inside you enter an enormous hall under a cupola of steel and glass; on the right you find a gigantic gymnasium with all modern apparatus, a platform with an excellent orchestra playing continuously. On the left is a beautiful theater, in the rear enormous kitchens and dining rooms, with inviting snow-white table linen and shining silverware. On the second floor are numerous reading rooms, lecture rooms and a splendid library, and in the garden outside any number of little pavilions, summer houses and places with national games for grown people and children. Numerous bands play select music. The whole institution was planned by the young czar, who very often visits it.

The establishment is a brilliant success and to visit it, especially on a Sunday, when it often is visited by 25,000 people of the working classes, is a real pleasure. No liquor is sold, no intoxicated person admitted, not an indecent word is heard, but the whole place is filled with a happy, laughing, good-natured crowd, enjoying themselves as children, scattered over the broad lawns, enjoying their meals and tea or listening to the splendid music of the military bands. Whole families go there early in the morning and spend the whole day, the children playing in the garden, admiring the clowns or enjoying the free rides in swings and merry-go-rounds.

NINE MILES OF CHAMPAGNE.

When the czar was on his recent visit to France he had the felicity of riding nine miles between two stacks of champagne bottles six feet high. This experience fell to his majesty in the vaults of Pommery and Greno. Each gallery in the vaults is marked with a name. The names are those of the greatest towns in the world, and there are hundreds of galleries, for the vaults contain 12 million bottles of champagne, some of them nearly 100 feet down in the bowels of the earth. The vaults occupy 180 acres and are built in an old chalk quarry outside of Rheims, near the church of St. Remi. There are 450 hands employed down in the vaults, of whom some fifty are women, whose work consists for the most part in labeling the bottles and twisting the wires for the corks. Each hand employed quaffs a tumblerful of Pommery before descending into the cold, electrically lighted vaults, where the work is done, and also reserves two bottles of good red wine per day, so that it is not altogether a bad game.—Beverages.

NO RIGHTS IN CHINA.

The division of sexes constitutes the most conspicuous and essential mark of heathenism which is to be found upon the Chinese nation. It forms an absolute and unlimited partition of the empire into two great classes, and robs each of those advantages and help which the other is primarily intended to supply. It deprives the race of fully one-half of the spirit, incentive and stimulus which result in progress and development.

It stunts the men, retards their intellectual growth, adds stupidity as a factor in their mental organization, and robs them of all aptitude or capacity for any other than merely physical growth. The extent to which this rule of division is enforced is simply astonishing. In families of the better sort the male and female members are strictly kept apart. The different sexes must each have different servants. Even brothers and sisters are not allowed to associate after the boys begin their studies, which is usually at the age of 5 years.

Mixed social gatherings are not only unknown, but they are regarded with abhorrence, and as proof of barbarism and moral degeneracy in all countries which permit them. Among the higher classes husbands never appear with their wives in the street or in any public place. Those of the working people seldom do, and upon such rare occasions the man invariably walks behind his wife, in order to watch her conduct and see that she behaves in a proper manner. Men are required by the statute to mourn three years for the death of a father and 100 days for the loss of a mother. But any husband who should mourn or exhibit any signs of grief at the death of his wife would in doing so disgrace himself in the eyes of his acquaintances, and would be expelled from decent society. He would be fortunate if he did not come under the penalties of that general provision for offenses "not otherwise provided for." Undoubtedly many Chinese husbands become devotedly attached to their wives after marriage—they have no opportunity before that interesting event—but it is a breach of propriety and good morals to manifest any feeling of that nature under any circumstances.

It is exceedingly indecorous for two intimate friends, when engaged in conversation, to mention the mere existence of a female relative of either. Men who have grown gray together under relations of the greatest intimacy will inquire about and discuss the qualities of the male members of the family of each, but they may never mention the female members, if it were only to inquire after a little girl 8 or 9 years old. That common question, "How is your wife?" becomes, when translated into Chinese and made use of in that empire, a gross and unpardonable insult, even between close friends. Chinamen never mention, address or appear to see any member of the other sex, excepting such as are within their own households. And in order to avoid the embarrassments of chance or causual meetings, every Chinese gentleman must simulate a cough when he approaches the entrance to the residence of a friend, in order that the female inmates of the establishment may be given full opportunity to disappear. To fail in furnishing this evidence of bronchial trouble would show a serious lack of good breeding. This is no mere theory, but the current and universal practice.

PRETTY THINGS IN IVORY.

Fine displays of carved ivory, in a wide range of artistic designs, show that ivory will largely supplant silver and gun metal for ornamental umbrella and parasol handles. Some brooches and sash clasps are also of ivory, as well as exquisitely carved fans in the small empire size. It may be as well to mention that ivory statuettes and other ornaments are also finding prominent places in the gilt and glass cabinets that have for the most part held only bits of rare pottery and rich cut and jeweled glass.—New York Tribune.

A New Yorker, who carried matches which ignite "only when struck on the box," added some chlorate of potash lozenges to his match pocket contents. The fire resulting from the union of the chlorate with the phosphorus on the box ruined his clothing and emptied the street car in which he was riding.

DISCOVERY OF PHILIPPINES

SOMETHING OF THE EARLY HISTORY OF ARCHIPELAGO AND EARLY SPANISH NAVIGATORS.

No portion of the world is more in the eye of the American public at the present time than the Philippine archipelago, and yet but little is popularly known of the history of the islands and their people. Their discovery by the Spanish navigators dates back to the early part of the sixteenth century. A Spanish fleet, under command of Magellan, left the port of San Lucar de Barrameda on Aug. 10, 1519, taking the direction of the Canary islands, arriving at Rio Janeiro on Dec. 13. Following the coast in search of the longed-for passage to the Pacific ocean, they entered the Solis river—so called because its discoverer, Joao De Solis, a Portuguese, was murdered there. Its name was afterwards changed to that of Rio de la Plata (the silver river.)

Continuing their course, the intense cold determined Magellan to winter in the next large river, known then as San Julian.

Tumults arose; some wished to return home; others harbored a desire to separate from the fleet, but Magellan had sufficient tact to persuade the crews to remain with him, reminding them of the shame which would befall them if they returned only to relate their failure. He added that, so far as he was concerned, nothing but death would deter him from executing the royal commission.

MUTINEERS PUNISHED.

As to the rebellious captains, Juan De Cartagena was already put in irons and sentenced to be cast ashore with provisions and a disaffected French priest for a companion. The sentence was carried out later on. Then Maghallanes sent a boat to each of three of the ships to inquire of the captains whom they served. The reply from all was that they were for the king and themselves. Thereupon thirty men were sent to the Victoria with a letter to Mendoza, and while he was reading it they rushed on board and stabbed him to death. Quesada then brought the ship alongside of the Trinidad, and, with sword and shield in hand, called in vain upon his men to attack. Maghallanes with great promptitude, gave orders to board Quesada's vessel. The next day Quesada was executed. After these vigorous but justifiable measures obedience was insured.

Still bearing southward within sight of the coast, on the 28th of October, 1520, the expedition reached and entered the seaway thenceforth known as the Magellan straits, dividing the island of Tierra del Fuego from the mainland of Patagonia.

On the way one ship had become a total wreck and the San Antonio deserted the expedition; her captain having been wounded and made prisoner by his mutinous officers, she was sailed in the direction of New Guinea. The three remaining vessels waited for the San Antonio several days and then passed through the straits. Great was the rejoicing of all when, on the 26th of November, 1520, they found themselves in the Pacific ocean. It was a memorable day. All doubt was now at an end as they cheerfully navigated across the broad expanse of sea.

TROUBLE WITH NATIVES.

On March 16, 1521, the Ladrone islands were reached. There the ships were so crowded with natives that they were obliged to be expelled by force. They stole one of the ship's boats and ninety men were sent on shore to recover it. After a bloody combat the boat was regained and the fleet continued its course westward. Coasting along the north of the island of Mindanao, they arrived at the mouth of the Butuan river, where they were supplied with provisions by the chief. It was Easter week and on this shore the first mass was celebrated in the Philippines. The natives showed great friendliness, in return for which Maghallanes took formal possession of their territory in the name of Charles I. The chieftain himself volunteered to pilot the ships to a fertile island—the kingdom of a relation of his—and passing between the islands of Bojol and Leyte the expedition arrived on April 7, at Cebu, where, on receiving the news, over 2,000 men appeared on the beach in battle array, with lances and shields.

The Butuan chief went on shore and explained that the expedition brought people of peace, who sought provisions. The king agreed to a treaty and proposed that it should be ratified according to the native formula—drawing blood from the breast of each party, the one drinking that of the other. This form of bond was called by the Spaniards the pacto de sangre, or the blood compact.

Maghallanes accepted the conditions and a hut was built on shore in which to say mass. Then he disemburked with his followers and the king, queen and prince came to satisfy their natural curiosity. They appeared to take great interest in the Christian religious rites and received baptism, although it would be venturesome to suppose they understood their meaning, as subsequent events proved. The princess and head men of the district followed their example and swore fealty and obedience to the king of Spain. Maghallanes (or Magellan) espoused the cause of his new allies, who were at war with the tribes on the opposite coast, and on April 25, 1521, he passed over to Magtan island. In the affray he was mortally wounded by an arrow, and thus ended his brief but lustrous career, which fills one of the most brilliant pages in Spanish annals.

THE DISCOVERER MALIGNED.

On the left bank of the Pasig river, facing the city of Manila, stands a monument to his memory. Another has been erected on the spot in Magtan island, where he is supposed to have been slain on the 27th of April, 1521. Also in the city of Cebu, near the beach, there is an obelisk to commemorate these heroic events.

It was well, perhaps, for Maghallanes to have ended his days out of reach of his royal master. Had he returned to Spain he would probably have met a fate similar to that which befell Columbus after his glories. The San Antonio, which, as already mentioned, deserted the fleet at the Magellan straits, continued her voyage from New Guinea to Spain, arriving at San Lucar de Barrameda in March, 1521. The captain, Alvaro Mesquita, was landed as a prisoner, accused of having seconded Maghallanes in repressing insubordination. To Maghallanes were ascribed the worst cruelties and infraction of the royal instructions. Accused and accusers were alike cast into prison, and the king, unable to lay hands on the deceased Maghallanes, sought this hero's wife and children. These innocent victims of royal vengeance were at once arrested and conveyed to Burgos, where the court happened to be, while the San Antonio was placed under embargo.

On the decease of Maghallanes the supreme command of the expedition in Cebu island was assumed by Duarte De Barbosa, who, with twenty-six of his followers, was slain at a banquet to which they had been invited by Hamabar, the king of the island. Juan Serrano had so ingratiated himself with the natives during the sojourn on shore that his life was spared for a while. Stripped of his raiment and armor, he was conducted to the beach, where the natives demanded a ransom for his person of two cannons from the ships' artillery. Those on board saw what was passing and understood the request, but they were loth to endanger the lives of all for the sake of one—"Melius est ut pereat unus quam ut pereat communitas," Saint Augustine—so they raised anchors and sailed out of the port, leaving Serrano to meet his terrible fate.

BURNED ONE OF THE BOATS.

Due to sickness, murder during the revolts and the slaughter in Cebu, the exploring party, now reduced to 109 souls all told, was deemed sufficient to conveniently manage three vessels. It was resolved, therefore, to burn the most dilapidated one—the Concepcion. At a general council Juan Carballo was chosen commander in chief of the expedition, with Gonzalo De Espinosa as captain of the Victoria. The royal instructions were read, and it was decided to go to the island of Bornu, already known to the Portuguese and marked on their charts. On the way they provisioned the ships off the coast of Palauan island and thence navigated to within ten miles of the capital of Bornu (probably Brunei). Here they fell in with a number of native canoes, in one of which was the king's secretary. There was a great noise with the sound of drums and trumpets and the ships saluted the strangers with their guns.

The natives came on board, embraced the Spaniards as if they were old friends and asked them who they were and what they came for. They replied that they were vassals of the king of Spain and wished to barter goods. Presents were exchanged and several of the Spaniards went ashore. They were met on the way by over 2,000 armed men and safely escorted to the king's quarters. After satisfying his majesty's numerous inquiries Captain Espinosa was permitted to return with his companions. He reported to Carabello all he had seen and in a council it was agreed that the town was too large and the armed men too numerous to warrant the safety of a longer stay.

NATIVES WERE TREACHEROUS.

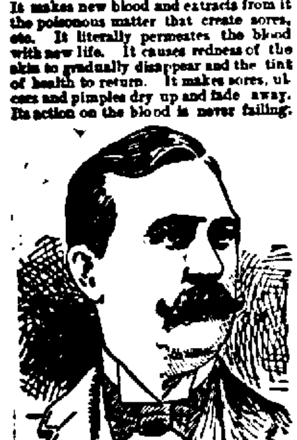

However, being in need of certain commodities, five men were dispatched to the town. As days passed by their prolonged absence caused suspicion and anxiety, so the Spaniards took in reprisal the son of the king of Luzon island, who had arrived there to trade, accompanied by 100 men and five women in a large praha. The prince made a solemn vow to see that the five Spaniards

RED NOSE.

Sure Sign of Bad Blood—Can Be Cured with Blood Wine.

Many of our Citizens Thus Afflicted Are Obtaining Wonderful Results from this Great Remedy.

Red nose, red, flushed face, pimply skin, sallow complexion, and sores all belong in the same class, known as diseases of the blood. There is really no excuse for a person suffering with these disfigurements, because the proper treatment brought to bear on the blood will quickly correct them. "Blood Wine" cures disease by working on the blood. It makes new blood and extracts from it the poisonous matter that create sores, etc. It literally permeates the blood with new life. It causes redness of the skin to gradually disappear and the tint of health to return. It makes sores, ulcers and pimples dry up and fade away. Its action on the blood is never failing.

This is a picture of Mr. Geo. A. Carter, one of Worcester's leading business men and a power in the industrial life of Massachusetts, who says:

"I am much pleased to be able to give my testimony as to the worth and curative properties of 'Blood Wine.' Having used this remedy for more than a year, I can truthfully say it is the best medicine I have ever used for the blood. I would not be without it at any price. After using the first bottle I was greatly benefited, and my entire system seemed renewed with energy, health, and strength before I had finished my second bottle. I can heartily and conscientiously recommend it for old or young as being a remedy that will not disappoint you."

You should try this great medicine; you will feel the effect of it the moment it strikes the stomach. "Blood Wine" contains no wine or opiates. It is not a temporary relief but an everlasting cure.

"Blood Wine" costs fifty cents a bottle, but you can sample it free of charge at Pellens & Pelster, Druggists.

returned and left two of his women and eight chiefs as hostages. Then Carabello sent a message to the king of Bornu intimating that if his people were not liberated he would seize all the junks and merchandise he might fall in with and kill their crews. Thereupon two of the retained Spaniards were set free, but in spite of the seizure of craft laden with silk and cotton the three men remaining had to be abandoned and the expedition set sail.

For reasons not very clear Carabalio was deprived of the supreme command and Espinosa was appointed in his place, while Juan Sebastian Elcano was elected captain of the Victoria. With a native pilot captured from a junk which they met on the way, the ships shaped their course toward the Moluccas islands and Nov. 8, 1521, they arrived at the island of Tidor. Thus the essential object of the expedition was gained—the discovery of a western route to the Spice islands.

A SERIES OF DISASTERS.

The king, richly adorned, went out with his suite to receive and welcome the Spaniards. He was anxious to barter with them, and when the Trinidad was consequently laden with valuable spices it was discovered that she had sprung a leak. Her cargo was therefore transferred to the sister ship, while the Trinidad remained in Tidor for repairs, and Elcano was deputed to make the voyage home with the Victoria, taking the western route of the Portuguese, in violaton of the treaty of Tordesillas. Elcano's crew consisted of fifty-three Europeans and a dozen natives of Tidor. The Victoria started for Spain at the beginning of the year 1522, passed through the Sunda straits at great risk of being seized by the Portuguese, experienced violent storms in the Mozambique channel, was almost wrecked rounding the Cape of Good Hope, a few of the crew died—their only food was a scanty ration of rice—and in their extreme distress they put in at Santiago island, off Cape Verde, to procure provisions and beg assistance from the Portuguese governor. It was like jumping into the lion's mouth. The governor imprisoned those who went to him, in defense of his sovereign's treaty rights; he seized the boat which brought them ashore, inquired of them where they had obtained the cargo and projected the capture of the Victoria.

Captain Elcano was not slow to comprehend the situation. He raised anchor and cleared out of the harbor and, as it had happened several times before, those who had the misfortune to be sent ashore were abandoned by their countrymen

THE HOME-COMING

The Victoria made the port of San Lucar de Barrameda on Sept. 6, 1522, so that in a little over three years Juan Sebastian Elcano had performed the most notable voyage hitherto on record—it was the first yet accomplished around the world. It must, however, be borne in mind that the discovery of the way to the Moluccas, going westward, was due to Maghallanes—of Portuguese birth—and that the route thence to Europe, continuing westward, had long before been determined by the Portuguese traders, whose charts Elcano used.

When Elcano and his seventeen companions disembarked their appearance was most pitiable—mere skeletons of men, weather-beaten and famished. The city of Seville received them with acclamation, but their first act was to walk barefooted in procession, holding lighted candles in their hands, to the church to give thanks to the Almighty for their safe deliverance from the hundred dangers which they had encountered. Clothes, money and all necessaries were supplied to them by royal bounty, whilst Elcano and the most intelligent of his companions were cited to appear at court to narrate their adventures. His majesty received them with marked deference. Elcano was awarded with a life pension of 500 ducats—worth at that date about $560—and as a lasting remembrance of his unprecedented feat his royal master knighted him and conceded to him the right of using on his escutcheon a globe bearing the motto, "Primus circumdedit me."

A TIRESOME WOMAN.

The most tiresome woman on earth is the woman who is continually talking about herself and her family affairs. And no matter how badly you hate to listen to her, no matter how you writhe in spirit and wish her at the bottom of Salt lake, you have got to listen to her and pretend to be interested. And you are under an obligation, for politeness' sake, to put in the "Ohs" and "Ahs" and the "Well, I declares" in the right places.

You can't escape her any more than you can escape death and taxes. And you need not attempt to knock her off the track by introducing some topic of your own, for she will not allow it. She knows what she wants to tell, and she is going to tell it. You can interpolate something about yourself, but the instant you stop to catch breath she will be right on with the man question, just as if you were in British Columbia.

To her there is nothing in the world of so much consequence as herself and her affairs. She will tell you how she makes gingerbread, and how she stirs up fritters, and how she sews buttons on Johnny's knee pants, and how much she pays for steak, and where she buys it, and how she likes her baked beans cooked, and what her husband says about the butter, and what she replies, and what all the children say on the same subject.

Generally she is a woman who has diseases of some kind, and always has them much worse than any other person ever dreamed of having them. Apparently she has patented and copyrighted and trademarked all her diseases, for she speaks of "my" cough and "my" rheumatism and "my" dyspepsia, and let her once get upon that subject there is no limit to its possibilities. She will give you the most minute particulars as to how she was taken, and how the sickness progressed, and what the doctor said, and what the nurse said, and how the remedies operated, and the whole thing will be so vividly described that you almost have lumbago in your back and vertigo in your head to listen to her.

And when she comes into your house she declares that she can't stop a minute, but she will stay till sunset, most likely, and then will be unutterably surprised to see how late it is. And she will leave you with regret and the comfortable assurance "that she will drop in some time soon and tell you just how it was that she got rid of her rheumatism."

If there is any species of bore more tiresome than the woman who talks continually about herself, then we most devoutly pray that we may be delivered from her!—New England Farmer.

APOSTLE OF HYGIENE.

Rome has had many strange visitors, but in late years none quite so extraordinary as the individual who has been striding about the streets for some days past. He calls himself the apostle of hygiene, and at least has the merit of practicing what he preaches. One day I was attracted by a crowd, and on approaching nearer found it headed by a tall, bronzed man, evidently a German, with blue eyes, long hair to his shoulders and a fair beard. His habiliments were strange in the extreme, consisting of a white cotton tunic, made rather long, adorned with pine needles and olive leaves, emblematic of the forest and universal peace; a gray cloak, legs and feet completely bare. In his hand he carried a bamboo stick, surmounted by a ball representing the world.

He is a certain Richard Gannasch, a glazier of Frankfort, who, being threatened with consumption, resolved to change his mode of life at once, and now he walks the world, eating only bread and fruit and sleeping under convenient trees. After four years of this course he is so hardened that neither rain, snow, cold nor heat affects him. He never touches wine; he never takes cold; he can walk seven miles in an hour with ease, and has been known to do seventy in a day. With a few pence he lives happier than many kings, and is trying to convert the world to his views. He has created a real sensation in Rome, but I have not heard that he has as yet any disciples.—Correspondence London Pall Mall Gazette.

CURES ECZEMA AND ITCHING HUMORS THROUGH THE BLOOD—COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

DANIEL BOONE'S CAVE.

The Grotto Where the Famous Scout and Indian Fighter Made His Asylum.

The casual observer, steaming down the Ohio on one of the comfortable packets that ply between Pittsburg and Cincinanti, will not notice the small stream that joins its turbid waters with the majestic river sweeping on to the Father of Waters, says a writer in the Pittsburg Gazette. The mouth of the little stream is almost hidden from view by the island that lies directly in front of it.

It is plainly visible when the river is at such a stage that the island is flooded. The stream, which flows through several counties in southern Ohio, is marked on the map as Raccoon creek and the island is known by the same name.

The traveler does not know nor does he even suspect that upon the banks of this stream, fifteen or twenty miles from its mouth, is found the most remarkable cave, the asylum, as tradition has it, of the famous hunter, pioneer and Indian fighter, Daniel Boone, during his sojourn in that vicinity. The stream is not navigable except to very small craft, but doubtless many a canoe, with dusky savages, either in search of the game which abounds along its shore, or in quest of the white man who dared encroach upon their domain, has glided over its waters.

The scenery at that time must have been awe-inspiring, grand beyond description. The stately trees with their branches overhanging the waters, and frequently dipping into them, the timid deer slaking his thirst in their depths and scampering away at the approach of danger, the squirrel looking down from his arboreal bower with an inquisitive eye, upon the swarthy boatman, all would have formed a picture fit for an artist's pen. But all that has passed away. The woodman's ax has leveled the magnificent forest, the white man's civilization has driven the noble warrior from his aboriginal home to the reservations of the west, and the hunter has exterminated the last deer that was so plentiful in this region.

Occasionally, one sees a small gray squirrel peeping cautiously from his hiding place in one of the few remaining trees that grow upon its banks.

The stream affords good water power, and at intervals of eight or ten miles is found an old-fashioned water mill, to which the small farmer brings his grain to be ground, the miller taking his toll just as his father before him did. Many of these old mills are in a state of utter ruin, the owners having found the business no longer profitable in this day of steam machinery and roller processes.

Boone's cave is located near one of these abandoned water mills, upon the rugged, forest-covered hillside, along the left bank of the creek. A small village of about one hundred inhabitants is situated almost opposite the cave.

It is very old and makes but little progress. The houses are weather-beaten, many of them having fallen into such a state of ruin as to be no longer inhabitable. But the denizens, from the tottering and feeble old man to the ragged but robust urchin that plays in its dirty streets, knows the traditions of the old cave and can relate them to the stranger with such an air of realism that he is completely carried away with their spirit and imagines he can see that sturdy pioneer fighting the lurking Indian and fleeing away to the security of the cave that bears his name.

No doubt many of the stories told about Boone and his wonderful exploits are wild exaggerations, but that he frequented this region is historically true, and that he inhabited this cave is proven by good circumstantial evidence.

Should you care to make a visit to the old cave and converse with the people of this little village, you take the stage at G——, a small town twelve miles distant on the Ohio river, and thence overland through a pretty rolling country, over a macadamized road, and all the while listening to a softly hummed air of the stage driver. He is a genial good fellow and a talkative companion. If you are a stranger he must know all about your business in "these parts." When questioned he will tell you that he has driven the stage and carried Uncle Sam's mail for the last ten years—and one might add has sung the same little song during all that time.

After innumerable stops you reach your destination and, if you make the trip during the summer, you will have ample time to visit the old cave that evening. Any urchin of the village will be glad to direct you to it. He is willing to speculate upon his chances of earning a quarter.

A bridle path leads to within two or three hundred yards of the cave, threading your way carefully through the dense underbrush. The ground is so steep and rugged that no attempts have been made to clear the soil for cultivation. It remains in much the same condition as when Boone frequented the region. The cave is in the solid rock and extends back quite a distance, far enough that the light of day does not penetrate its stygian blackness. At its entrance a man may stand erect, but it slopes gently backward until one almost has to crawl.

It is an ideal hiding place and must have served its purposes well in the time of Boone. The tradition is that he used this cave continually as a hiding place on his trips to and from the "dark and bloody ground" and during any protracted stay in this region long before Ohio was settled. This is undoubtedly true, for the visitor may see in a remote corner of the cave this inscription, "D. Boone," carved on the top in huge uncouth characters, but plainly visible.

The top is covered with the names of the people who have visited the cave, each one eager to emulate the example of the renowned Indian fighter, but his name stands out in bold relief, eclipsing all the others just as the name and fame outrank those of all his contemporaries in history.

You retrace your steps, feeling amply repaid for your visit to this old landmark, and prepare to pass the night in the neighboring village, where your host will regale you with an oft-repeated tale of Boone and his prowess.

HIGHWAYMEN AT WEST POINT.

(Army and Navy Register.)

A dispatch from West Point, March 11, says: "Three highwaymen who tried to hold up big, goodnatured Lieutenant Chauncey Humphrey of the Third United States infantry, who as officer of the day was on his way to visit the guard at the south gate guardhouse last night about 11 o'clock, will remember their encounter with the big infantry officer for many a day, for when West Point's foot ball tackle in '98 got through with them they were a sorry-looking sight.

As Lieutenant Humphrey was on his way to the guardhouse on the main road leading to the village of Highland Falls he was suddenly held up by three men, the leader of whom demanded his money. Instead of complying, the big lieutenant let drive his good right hand and caught the leader under the jaw and sent him bowling to the other side of the road, where he lay groaning. The other two men were as quickly dispatched and Lieutenant Humphrey piled them up in a heap, and then, calling on one of the mounted patrol, who in a few minutes passed the place, marched them to the guardhouse. The lieutenant had their cuts and bruises dressed immediately. They were marched off the reservation, and it is safe to believe that they will not trouble West Point again. The names of the men could not be learned. It is said they were employed at the West Point tunnel by a contractor who is putting up some iron girders there. Lieutenant Humphrey graduated from the military academy in the class of '98. He has just recently returned from the Philippines, where he has seen service for the past three years, and during that time has had several hand-to-hand encounters with the insurgents. He is on duty as instructor in the department of drawing."

Some women are tireless in their home work, others in their work in the church or their favorite society or club; they laugh and sing and are happy.

But think of the poor one who is left at home, utterly unable to make any effort whatever, broken hearted and despondent.

The horror of female complaints is upon her; she is oppressed by that distressing bearing-down feeling, backache, her nerves are all gone, don't care to move and wants only to be left alone.

O, dear sister, don't you know by this time that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will surely reach the cause of all this trouble and make you well and strong! It certainly will cure you as certainly as the sun shines. Read what Mrs. Gleason says:

MRS. M. GLEASON, Chicago, Ill.

"I want every woman to know that Lydia E. Pinkam's Vegetable Compound has been of untold value to a large number of women of our order. I know positively that it has cured many of the most distressing diseases of the pelvic organs, falling of the womb, ovarian troubles, and painful menstruation. There is no question in the world but that it is superior to any medicine for women. I have used it myself and know whereof I speak. — Yours truly, Mrs. M. Gleason, 564 West Taylor St., Chicago."

Two More Sufferers Cured.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— I was sick with female weakness. I took all kinds of medicines, you might say, and was operated on by doctors, but they did me no good. After taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I found relief and am now enjoying good health. Since taking your medicine I have become the mother of a little boy. I will praise your medicine as long as I live."—Mrs. Sarah E. Breder, Amsden, Ohio. (Dec. 27, 1900.)

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I suffered daily from backache and stomach ache. Menstruation was suppressed for six months, and then appeared again, but very painful and irregular. Instead of consulting a doctor I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I now feel as well and strong as ever I did, and since taking it I have given birth to a little boy, and we do bless your medicine. I will advise all sick women to use it." —Mrs. Ida Petterson, Box 93, Amasa, Mich. (March 1, 1901.)

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony as we are constantly publishing; only the unquestionable merit of Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine can accomplish so much. Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. if you are ill. The efficiency of her advice is proven by thousands of letters from women who have been cured of female troubles by her guidance and medicine.

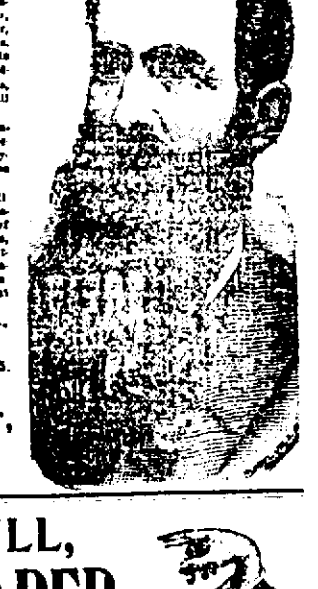

$5000 REWARD. We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

HEADACHE CHARMED

IT IS THE EXPERIENCE OF FORT WAYNE PEOPLE THAT PROVES THE MAGICAL EFFECT OF DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE PILLS WITH SICK AND NERVOUS HEADACHE.

It has never come to any other medicine—never to all medicines—the abundance of Fort Wayne testimony showing the unequaled merit established by Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills. There is probably no case of nervous sick headache they will not cure.

Mrs. John Irwin, of No. 16 Monroe street, Fort Wayne, Ind., says: "I used to suffer from good, hard, nervous sick headaches— headaches that prostrate and leave one nervous. I was advised to use Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills and got some at Meyer Bros. & Co.'s drug store, No. 14 Calhoun street. The medicine has been a great boon, the headaches are gone and with them the attendant nervousness and depression. I think the Nerve Pills particularly good." Dr. A. W. SOME VERY OLD MINES

Evidences That the Egyptians Knew of the Rich Gold Fields of South Africa.

The explorations of Dr. Carl Peters on the African continent of late years have added much to the knowledge the world now possesses of the ancient mines of that continent. In a recent letter from the Zambesi river country the doctor reports that all the ancient ruins along the eastern border of Mashanaland belong apparently to the same civilization—that, namely, of the Sabaeans, a race nearly related to the Phoenicians of the Mediterranean. The land, he thinks, is the Ophir of King Solomon's time. The word Sofala, which designates part of the coast, was originally, he says, Sa-Ophara, or Ophirland, the prefix Sa being Egyptian and meaning land. There are many evidences that the Egyptians discovered the gold-bearing character of the country and worked it for its gold for a long period, but were succeeded by the Phoenicians. We have in Egypt curious inscriptions telling of expeditions during Queen Hatsepu's reign, 1600 B. C., to Punt. King Sanch Kara, about 2500 B. C., also sent expeditions to Punt, bringing back gold, ivory, valuable woods, leopard skins, monkeys and baboons—products identical with those credited to Ophir. Dr. Peters is of opinion that Ophir and Punt are the same and that Ophir was originally an Egyptian mining colony.

The evidence that the Egyptians once occupied the country is very strong. Livingstone, in his diary, calls attention to the fact that a tribe on the Rovuma river shows tattoos of a decidedly Egyptian character. Sofala, as already mentioned, has an Egyptian prefix. Dr. Peters, during his last expedition, saw some "newly discovered Bushmen paintings, which in form and color are of an absolutely Egyptian character." It is well known that the Hottentot language contains traces of the ancient Egyptians. A police officer at Umtali has recently found south of Zambesi a well-preserved Egyptian statuette 3½ inches long, representing, it is thought, the goddess Isis. The hieroglyphics about the waist of the figure have not yet been deciphered, but it is supposed to be about 5,000 years old. Great interest must attach to the statue, as it proves direct Egyptian influence in South Africa. It cannot have come overland from the Nile to the Zambesi—the distance and character of the interlying country precluding intercourse—but must have been brought by voyagers coming by sea. Through the Egyptians the Phoenicians became acquainted with the gold mines between the Zambesi and Sabi rivers in South Africa, and on the decline of the Egyptian empire the Phoenicians, about 1200 B. C., took possession. King David and King Solomon, being neighbors of the Phoenicians, learned from them about the wealth of Ophir in the yellow metal and drew gold largely from that region. Many objects found in the ruined cities on the Zambesi testify to the presence of a Semetic race, worshipers of Baal and Astarte. Zimbabwe was an ancient Phoenician Johannesburg.

Theodore Bent, the explorer, points out that the fortifications and water furrows were used in connection with the mining business. Existing names, such as Macaspa, Umsapa, Umaspi and Sabi, lead Dr. Peters to believe that the miners in the later period were, as already stated, Sabaeans or Phoenicians. He has found in Manicaland two stones with old inscriptions, which seem to be in old Semitic characters. The world will await the reading of these inscriptions and of the inscription on the Egyptian statuette with much interest.

OPERA GLASS THAT FOLDS.

A pocket opera glass on an entirely new principle has just been introduced in Paris. It is known as "La Reine." When in use the lenses are entirely protected against the outside light, and when folded it conveniently slips into the pocket, and here the delicate surfaces of the glasses are also protected from coming in contact with any foreign substance calculated to injure them. When closed for the pocket it is perfectly flat, only one-half an inch thick, so that no carrying case whatever is required.

SCIENCE AND SENSES.

The eye and the ear have long been regarded as marvels of mechanism, quite the most wonderful things in the world. But compared with the implements of a present day laboratory the sensitiveness of all human organs seems gross enough. A photographic plate, coupled with a telescope, will reveal the presence of millions of stars whose light does not affect the retina in the least. The microscope, too, with its revelations of the world of the infinitely small, tell us how crude, after all, is this most delicate of the senses, says Harper's Magazine. Indeed, we may liken it to a piano where only a single octave, toward the middle, sounds. From the ultra violet to the lowest reaches of the spectrum is a range of some nine octaves of light vibrations, of which, save for our new mechanical senses, we should never have been conscious of but one.

The ear hears little of what is going on around us. By means of a microphone the tread of a fly sounds like the tramp of cavalry. Our heat sense is very vague; we need a variation of at least one-fifth of a degree on a thermometer to realize any difference in temperature. Professor Langley's little bolometer will note the difference of a millionth of a degree. It is two hundred thousand times as sensitive as our skin.

ACETYLENE GAS FOR STOVES.

While, at last accounts, there was only one town in the United States lighted throughout by acetylene (Dana, Ill.,) this method of illumination is not so unusual in Europe. There the use of acetylene for commercial purposes is much more common than it is in America. In Switzerland there are a number of villages dependent upon acetylene for their lighting. Among these are Worb, near Berne; Laupen, Lichtensteig, Rheineck and some half dozen others. The latest phase of the acetylene development, however, is its use for cooking, the exact advantages of which cannot be well appreciated in this country with its cheap kerosene at every corner, and comparatively cheap gas and coal. A stove designed for this purpose is made in Paris and contains an oven underneath, a hot plate shelf and two boiling burners. The gas is burned without any gauze on the burners. The stove, it is said, is capable of taking gas under a wide range of pressure, and of being lighted and extinguished without making an alarming noise. Thorough purification of the acetylene gas is necessary, however, owing to the atmospheric burners, which would otherwise become more or less choked with the impurities.

TARGETS THAT MOVE.

Kipling was not merely looking for a novel, poetic figure when he referred to "your beasts of warren and chase," as the pleasures of shooting is apparently much more eagerly sought in the island than elsewhere in English-speaking countries. Take, for instance, the British device intended for shooting practice with a shotgun or rifle. By means of this device the would-be hunter can have running rabbits, or bounding deer on his own estate. The arrangement consists of an undulating track, on which runs a wheeled carrier. To this is attached the target, made to represent a rabbit or deer or other animal. The target is actuated by an elastic cord, attached to the end of the line of railway. The target is set, and then at the proper moment the catch is released by pulling a string or other suitable means, and away bounds the rabbit or other target. The undulating track gives a more lifelike movement to the various animal forms attached to the carrier. These targets are readily interchangeable, so that shooting at any distance may be made as difficult as desired. When the track is laid down in a rock or woody field the practice is said to be very good.

DREADFUL ATTACK OF WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Ellen Harlison, of 300 Park Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes as follows: "Our two children had a severe attack of whooping cough, one of them in the paroxysm of coughing would often faint and bleed at the nose. We tried everything we heard of without getting relief. We then called in our family doctor who prescribed Foley's Honey and Tar. With the very first dose they began to improve and we feel that it has saved their lives." Refuse substitutes. Sold by Dreier & Bro. and Pellens & Polster.

The olive oil product of the year in Andalusia amounts to about 8,500,000 pounds.

DULLARD OFFICERS.

Candidates for commissions in the British army, says the London Express, have now so low an educational test to pass that the examiners have recently been confronted with an array of smatterers anxious to lead soldiers in the field.

It was at one time thought that the exigencies of war promoted this abnormal condition, but that has been exploded, and the commission now sitting is finding that the trouble is much more deep-seated, and that it lies in the fact that a sufficient number of men of the right educational standard is not coming forward.

It has been found necessary to lower the standard for admission and it is recorded officially that one candidate was recently passed into the cavalry who got 168 marks out of 20,000; and six cavalry officers between them got less than 13,000 marks out of 120,000.

This absence of educational qualification is in some cases balanced by the possession of money, without which no gentleman can exist in the cavalry.

The situation is a serious one for the army, and unless a proportion of the better-educated classes can to some extent be drawn from massing into other learned professions, the king's commission will lose its proper status.

The vacancies in the service are being largely filled by candidates passing from the militia, who have been hurried out to the front. Some of the examination reports since the war began reveals a shocking state of affairs.

"I would wish to draw attention to the fact that the writing and spelling of many of the junior officers is very indifferent. . . . I hope that you will consider it worth while bringing this fact to the notice of the head masters of public schools, as considering the amount the parents pay for their education, the result is not at all satisfactory."

A PARISIAN SWINDLE.

A respectable tradesman residing in the Rue du Mont d'Or was recently drinking coffee in an establishment situated in the Boulevard des Batignolles, Paris, when a fashionably dressed gentleman took a seat next to him and entered into lively conversation. He declared that he was a jeweler and entered into details as to his business. During the conversation an elderly man entered the cafe and, having sat down, began to eat mussels from a paper bag he had brought with him. The supposed jeweler drew attention to the circumstance when the last comer uttered an exclamation and declared that he had found a pearl in a mussel. He opened another and came across a second pearl, to the general astonishment. The jeweler examined them and after some hesitation remarked that they were worth about 200 francs. As their finder offered them for sale at the rate of 100 francs a piece, the jeweler advised his companion to purchase them.

This the man did and he thought he had made a good bargain until he called upon a jeweler who informed him that both pearls were worth 3 francs at the outside. It will be easily surmised that the pseudo-jeweler and the elderly gentleman were artful swindlers.

BEWARE OF USING PEPPER.

A writer on foods declares that pepper is a vegetable poison, a stimulant, but in no sense a food; a substance non-usable by the vital organs, and therefore to be thrown out of the vital domain.

Red or black pepper is a prolific cause of enlargement of the blood vessels, and ultimately of disease of the heart. Its immediate effect is to create increased action, not only of the capillaries, causing temporary congestion and even inflammation of the mucous surfaces, but also of the organs which secrete the digestive fluids. Its ultimate effect is to weaken and deaden these organs by repeated stimulation to abnormal action; it also impairs or destroys the nerves of taste in the mouth, together with the gastric or other nerves which aid in the process of digestion.

When these are weakened by stimulants the functions themselves are necessarily impaired, and confirmed dyspepsia with its attendant train of bad symptoms brings up the rear.

Zoa Phora Cures All Female Complaints

Mrs. Joseph Bahr, 215 Fremont Street, Kokomo, Ind., Restored to Perfect Health by Zoa Phora After Years of Suffering.

Zoa Phora Brings Instant Relief to Pains and Backache—It is a Certain Regulator and the Only Safe Remedy in the Danger Periods of Woman's Life.

MRS. JOSEPH BAHR, Kokomo, Ind.

For thirty years Zoa Phora has been the safe, ever-ready, ever-reliable stand-by for the sickly women of the West. It quickly and permanently cures ovarian trouble, painful, profuse or suppressed menstruation, leucorrhea, displacement, ulceration or inflammation or derangement of the organs of maternity. In the change from maidenhood to womanhood, or, in the later change of life, Zoa Phora brings the sickly woman through to perfect health and strength. It is a constant support and strengthening tonic for expectant mothers and makes the hour of maternity almost free from pain and agony. To the frail mother in the days of recovery from the ordeal of childbirth, Zoa Phora brings health and vigor, tones the nerves and sends new, rich blood coursing through her veins. To women who are in constant dread of the approach of their menstrual period, Zoa Phora brings relief and comfort as well as strength and health.

Mrs. Joseph Bahr, 215 Fremont Street, Kokomo, Ind., writes under date of February 5, 1902: "I feel like a new person. I fully believe that Zoa Phora will do all that is claimed for it and I would advise all suffering women to try this wonderful remedy. I had a combination of female troubles, including bearing down feeling in the lower part of the abdomen, continual backache, burning sensation—the result of kidney trouble. I was irregular and profuse and had dizzy spells, accompanied by a melancholy feeling. Since using Zoa Phora nearly all these disagreeable and unnatural conditions have vanished and I cannot find words to express my gratitude toward you for what your valuable remedy has done for me. It is my wish that you print my letter in your advertisements for the benefit of other suffering women and I will gladly answer all letters of inquiry, regarding my case, providing stamp is furnished for reply."

There is no case of leucorrhea, change of life, irregular or suppressed menstruation, weakness, falling or displacement, inflammation, backache, bloating or general debility resulting from female weakness or derangement that Zoa Phora will not cure quickly and positively.

Zoa Phora is strongly recommended by hundreds of ladies from every state in the Union. If you suffer from any of the pains or ills of female weakness do not delay, but get a dollar bottle of Zoa Phora. It is for sale by all druggists. The Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., is glad to send a large trial bottle free to every suffering woman who will send them her name and address and the doctor will gladly answer all letters and give advice to suffering women absolutely free.

A NIGHT AT THE PLAY.

THE HOLDEN COMEDY COMPANY.

The founders of popular prices, the great Holden Comedy company, will open a week's engagement at the Masonic theater next Monday evening, presenting the comedy drama, "Nobody's Claim." The Holdens have won an enviable reputation in the east and are noted for the finish and style with which they give their performances. Special scenery, beautiful costumes and a splendid company are attributes, with plays that are successes. Dime matinees will be given, beginning Tuesday. A limited number of ladies will be admitted free on the opening night. Call for them at the box office.

May Irwin. Coming to the Temple Thursday, May 8th, in "The Widow Jones." Her greatest Success.

Scene in "Nobody's Claim" by the Holden Comedy Company.

MAUDE ADAMS' PRICES.

The Maude Adams engagement at the Masonic Temple theater Tuesday evening, May 6th, will be the event of the season. Miss Adams comes here under the largest guarantee ever offered an attraction by Manager Scanlan. Following is the schedule of prices as arranged by Mr. Frohman's representative, for this city: Lower floor, $2.50 and $2.00; balcony, $1.50 and $1.00. Admission, balcony, 50 cents. Seats can now be secured at the box office by letter, telephone or messenger. No tickets laid aside longer than one day and positively no free tickets issued to anyone. Out o. town patrons will see the advantage this plan offers to early buyers.

MAUDE ADAMS IN "QUALITY STREET."

The Maude Adams in Temple theater will present, on Tuesday evening, May 6th, Miss Maude Adams in "Quality Street," Mr. J. M. Barrie's beautiful and fascinating comedy. Mr. Barrie's new play is in four acts, taking place in a quaint community in England at the time of the Napoleonic wars. Phoebe Throssell, beautifully played by Miss Adams, is still in her 'teens and lives with her older sister, Susan, in a pretty cottage on Quality street. They have a modest competence and, being under the espionage of relatives, they are prim and demure. Phoebe falls in love with Valentine Brown and permits him to kiss her, but when she expects a proposal of marriage he goes away to war. Phoebe does not tell him that an investment she and her sister have made on Brown's advice has turned out badly. After he has gone the sisters start a school in their home.

It is nine years before Brown returns. Phoebe almost has given up hope of getting release from her humdrum way of life. She has hidden her ringlets. Brown is aghast at the change in her and does not conceal his astonishment. On a rebellious impulse she puts on a gown that was given to her by her sister years before and goes to a military ball. She is introduced as a niece of Miss Throssell. Even Brown is deceived, but instead of making love to the girl he tells her of his love for Phoebe. Thus the usual happy ending comes about.

Smith O'Brien in "The Game Keeper."

"THE GAME KEEPER."

"The Game Keeper," with a wealth of beautiful scenery and a strong company of artists, with Smith O'Brien at the head, will be seen at the Temple Wednesday, April 23rd. The play was first produced last year. It proved to be an artistic and financial success for its owners, and this season it is being presented on a large and magnificent scale.

Mr. O'Brien says he has the strongest supporting company he has ever had, among them being Thos. J. Smith, Stanley Johns, John D. Barrett, Miss Elizabeth DeWitt and Baby Madeline, a very clever child.

BLANCHE WALSH IN "JANICE MEREDITH."

Blanche Walsh's production of "Janice Meredith," said to be magnificently staged and played by a large company of talented actors, will be the attraction at the Temple Wednesday, May 14th, 1902.

This is the revolutionary play which made such a notable success in New York last winter. It is founded on Paul Leicester Ford's great story of the same title, the most successful piece of American fiction published in ten years. Miss Walsh, famous for her impersonation of "La Tosca," "Fedora," "Cleopatra" and "More Than Queen," of course plays the title role. "Janice Meredith" is presented in four scenes, the most faithful stage pictures of the continental times ever painted.

CHURCHES BUILT BY BREWERS.

The church at Burton-on-Trent, which the king visited during his week-end at Hangemore, is being altered and renovated by Lord Burton. There seems, by the way, says the Tatler, to be some sort of subtle connection between brewing or distilling and ecclesiastical architecture. At any rate, Lord Burton is by no means the first big brewer to spend money freely on church restoration. St. Patrick's cathedral in Dublin was restored at an enormous outlay by Sir Benjamin Guinness, the founder of the famous brewing firm of that name and father of Lord Ardilaun and Lord Iveagh. Christ church, too, Dublin's second cathedral, found a generous friend in Mr. Henry Rowe, the head of a great whisky distillery. The beautiful Protestant cathedral of Cork—St. Finbarr's—was rebuilt by Mr. Wise, a well known distiller in the south of Ireland, in conjunction with Mr. Crawford, a brewer, who also provided an observatory and a fine library for the local Queen's college and a school of art for the citizens of Cork.

AN EASIER PARABLE.

Once in a sheltered garden there bloomed a beautiful flower, so sweet and pure that the south wind forsook all other spots to sweep ceaselessly, caressingly, around it, whispering soft words of love.

But one day the flower faded, nor could the south wind, with warm kisses, revive its droping head.

Then came the gardener through his garden, who, seeing the dying flower, plucked it from its stem, and, tearing out its golden heart, buried it deep in the black earth.

"Cruel, cruel man!" shrieked the south wind, because it understood not.

All winter long the cold, white snow lay on the heart of the flower, and over it the south wind sobbed its rage at the pitiless gardener.

But, when the spring came, behold! the flower arose, more beautiful than before.

And the south wind, understanding, kissed the bronzed cheek of the gardener in joyous penitence.

For kind of heart is the Gardener of the universe; though man, foolish and fickle as the south wind, understands Him not, and as one who loves all growing things will stoop to brush a little blemish from the humblest flower, so stoops He to remove the smallest sorrow from the tiniest blossom in His great garden of light petaled stars.

At Gandersheim, in the Hartz mountains, one of the local schoolmaster's hens recently laid her one thousandth egg. To celebrate the occasion the street was gayly decorated with flags, while in the evening the health of the hen was drunk by the schoolmaster's friends at a supper, the principal dish at which consisted of a gigantic omelet.

We have a good, old common-sense medicine for those subject to malaria.

The sufferer from malaria is too apt to dose himself with constantly increasing amounts of quinine, which, while it gives relief, is very injurious to the system, as all who have taken it to any considerable degree have found out to their cost.

The way to cure malaria is to drive it out of the system—and at the same time to so strengthen and tone yourself up that malaria will find you immune in the future. The way to bring about this happy condition of affairs is to take

Smith's Green Mountain Renovator.

EVERY SUFFERER FROM MALARIA SHOULD TRY IT.

IT IS POSITIVELY GUARANTEED.

This medicine is conceded by all who have taken it to be the one sovereign cure for this much dreaded disease.

This isn't a new medicine, although its name may be new to you. On the contrary, it is very old, having been for many years the standard medicine of Vermont, where its home is. Now a company has taken hold of it, appointed reliable agents throughout the country and placed it within the reach of everybody.

The poisons of malaria, when they once get into the system, must be completely driven out before permanent relief can be hoped for. SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR never fails to do this if taken regularly and persistently. All the noxious, poisonous, malarial taint will be completely removed from the blood, and you will be permanently cured. This is not only by far the best way, but, in fact, the only way to cure malaria.

SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR

will not only drive out malaria, but it is a tonic, strength builder and general cleanser and renovator of the entire system.

We sell it with the strongest possible guarantee—your money back if you are not benefited.

Dr. C. A. Zimmerman. Dear Sir—As you have asked an account of the wonderful cure of my pulmonary trouble (consumption—nevertheless—my mother reckoned and died of consumption) I will comply with the request. About two years ago I began to be troubled with a hacking cough and pain in my side and chest, in the spring and fall would have attacks of pleurisy lasting three or four days. My cough gradually increased and I commenced raising balls of yellowish matter. * * * The attacks of pleurisy lasted from two to three weeks the amount I raised changed to a dark greenish matter. I had severe pains and soreness of chest and lungs. * * * Was growing weak and my friends thought to give me every comfort thinking that was all the relief there was for me. I do not hesitate to say your treatment saved me from the grave. EMELINE JOHNSON, 2 A. D. JOHNSON Winchester Ind.

MISS MAUDE ADAMS.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Washington, April 6.—A vivid glimpse of the splendors and glories of heavenly life is presented in this discourse by Dr. Talmage on the text, Rev. viii., 1: "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

The busiest place in the universe is heaven. It is the center from which all good influences start; it is the goal at which all good results arrive. The Bible represents it as active with wheels, and wings, and orchestras, and processions, mounted or charioted. But my text describes a space when the wheels ceased to roll and the trumpets to sound and the voices to chant. The riders on the white horses reined in their chargers. The doxologies were hushed and processions halted. The hand of arrest was upon all the splendors. "Stop, heaven!" cried an omnipotent voice, and it stopped. For thirty minutes everything celestial stood still. "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

From all we can learn it is the only time heaven ever stopped. It does not stop as other cities for the night, for there is no night there. It does not stop for a plague, for the inhabitant never says, "I am sick." It does not stop for bankruptcies, for its inhabitants never fail. It does not stop for impassable streets, for there are no fallen snows nor sweeping freshets. What, then, stopped it for thirty minutes? Grotius and Prof. Stuart think it was at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. Mr. Lord thinks it was in the year 311, between the close of the Diocletian persecution and the beginning of the wars by which Constantine gained the throne. But that was all a guess, though a learned and brilliant guess. I do not know when it was, and I do not care when it was, but of the fact that such an interregnum of sound took place I am certain. "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

And, first of all, we may learn that God and all heaven then honored silence. The longest and widest dominion that ever existed is that over which stillness was queen. For an eternity there had not been a sound. Worldmaking was a later day occupation. For unimaginable ages it was a mute universe. God was the only being, and as there was no one to speak to there was no utterance. But that silence has all been broken up into worlds and it has become a noisy universe. Worlds in upheaval, worlds in congelation, worlds in conflagration, worlds in revolution.

If geologists are right (and I believe they are), there has not been a moment of silence since this world began its travels, and the crashing and the splitting and the uproar and the hubbub are ever in progress. But when, among the supernals, a voice cried, "Hush!" and for half an hour heaven was still, silence was honored. The full power of silence many of us have yet to learn. We are told that when Christ was arraigned, "He answered not a word."

That silence was louder than any thunder that every shook the world. Oftentimes, when we are assailed and misrepresented, the mightiest thing to say is nothing, and the mightiest thing to do is to do nothing. Those people who are always rushing into print to get themselves set right accomplish nothing but their own chagrin. Silence! Do right and leave the results to God. Among the grandest lessons the world has ever learned are the lessons of patience taught by those who endured uncomplainingly personal or domestic or political injustice, stronger than any bitter or sarcastic or revengeful answer was the patient silence.

The famous Dr. Morrison, of Chelsea, achieved as much by his silent patience as by his pen and tongue. He had asthma that for twenty-five years brought him out of his couch at 2 o'clock each morning. His four sons and daughters dead. The remaining child, by sunstroke, made insane. The afflicted man once said: "At this moment there is not an inch of my body that is not filled with agony." Yet he was cheerful, triumphant, silent. Those who were in his presence said they felt as though they were in the gates of heaven. Oh, the power of patient silence! Aeschylus, the immortal poet, was condemned to death for writing something that offended the people. All the pleas in his behalf were of no avail until his brother uncovered the arm of the prisoner and showed that his hand had been shot off at Salamis. That silent plea liberated him. The loudest thing on earth is silence if it be of the right kind and at the right time. There was a quaint old hymn spelled in the old style, and once sung in the churches:

The race is not forever got
By him who fastest runs,
Nor the Battel by those peopell
That shoot with the longest guns.

My friends, the tossing sea of Galilee seemed most to offend Christ by the amount of noise it made, for He said to it, "Be still!" Heaven has been crowning kings and queens unto God for many centuries, yet heaven never stopped a moment for any such occurrence, but it stopped thirty minutes for the coronation of silence. "There was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour."

Learn also from my text that heaven must be an eventful and active place, from the fact that it could afford only thirty minutes of recess. There have been events on earth and in heaven that seemed to demand a whole day or whole week or whole year for celestial consideration. If Grotius was right and this silence occurred at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, that scene was so awful and so prolonged that the inhabitants of heaven could not have done justice to it in many weeks. After fearful besiegement of the two fortresses of Jerusalem—Antonia and Hippicus—had been going on for a long while, a Roman soldier mounted on the shoulders of another soldier hurled into the window of the temple a firebrand, and the temple was all aflame, and after covering many sacrifices to the holiness of God, the building itself became a sacrifice to the rage of man. The hunger of the people in that city during the besiegement was so great that as some outlaws were passing a doorway and inhaled the odors of food, they burst open the door, threatening the mother of the household with death unless she gave them some food, and she took them aside and showed them that it was her own child she was cooking for the ghastly repast. Six hundred priests were destroyed on Mount Zion because the temple being gone, there was nothing for them to do. Six thousand people in one cloister were consumed. There were one million one hundred thousand dead, according to Josephus. Grotius thinks that this was the cause of silence in heaven for half an hour. If Mr. Lord was right, and this silence was during the Diocletian persecutions, by which eight hundred and forty-four thousand Christians suffered death from sword and fire, and banishment and exposure, why did not heaven listen throughout at least one of those awful years? No! Thirty minutes! The fact is that the celestial program is so crowded with spectacle that it can afford only one recess in all eternity, and that is for a short space. While there are great choruses in which all heaven can join, each soul there has a story of divine mercy peculiar to itself, and it must be a solo. How can heaven get through with all its recitatives, with all its cantatas, with all its grand marches, with all its victories? Eternity is too short to utter all the praise.

In my text heaven spared thirty minutes, but it will never again spare one minute. In worship in earthly churches where there are many to take part, we have to counsel brevity, but how will heaven get on rapidly enough to let one hundred and forty-four thousand get through each with his own story, and then one hundred and forty-four million and then one hundred and forty-four billion and then one hundred and forty-four trillion. Not only are all the triumphs of the past to be commemorated, but all the triumphs to come. Not only what we now know of God, but what we will know of Him after everlasting study of the deific. If my text had said there was silence in heaven for thirty days, I would not have been startled at the announcement, but it indicates thirty minutes. Why, there will be so many friends to hunt up; so many of the greatly good and useful that we will want to see; so many of the inscrutable things of earth we will need explained; so many exciting earthly experiences we will want to talk over, and all the other spirits and all the ages will want the same, that there will be no more opportunity for cessation. How busy we will be kept in having pointed out to us the heroes and heroines that the world never fully appreciated—the yellow fever and cholera doctors who died, not flying from their posts; the female nurses who faced pestilence in the lazarettos; the railroad engineers who stayed at their places in order to save the train, though they themselves perished. Hubert Goffin, the master miner, who, landing from the bucket at the bottom of the mine, just as he heard the waters rush in, and when one jerk of the rope would have lifted him into safety, put in the bucket a blind miner who wanted to go to his sick child and jerked the rope for him to be pulled up, crying: "Tell them the water has burst in and we are probably lost; but we will seek refuge at the other end of the right gallery;" then giving the command to the other miners till they digged themselves so near out that the people from the outside could come to their rescue. The multitudes of men and women who got no crown on earth, we will want to see when they get their crown in heaven. I tell you heaven will have no more half hours to spare.

Besides that, heaven is full of children. They are in the vast majority. No child on earth who amounts to anything can be kept quiet half an hour, and how are you going to keep five hundred million of them quiet half an hour. You know heaven is much more of a place than it was when that recess of thirty minutes occurred. Its population has quadrupled, sextupled, centupled. Heaven has more on hand, more of rapture, more of knowledge, more of inter-communication, more of worship. The most thrilling place we have ever been in is stupid compared with that, and, if we now have no time to spare, we will then have no eternity to spare. Silence in heaven only half an hour!

My subject also impresses me with the immortality of a half hour. That half hour mentioned in my text is more widely known than any other period in the calendar of heaven. None of the whole hours of heaven are measured off, none of the years, none of the centuries. Of the millions of ages past, and the millions of ages to come, not one is especially measured off in the Bible. But the half hour of my text is made immortal. The only part of eternity that was ever measured by earthly timepiece was measured by the minute hand of my text. Oh, the half hours! They decide everything. I am not asking what you will do with the years or months or days of your life, but what of the half hours. Tell me the history of your half hours, and I will tell you the story of your whole life on earth and the story of your whole life in eternity. The right or wrong things you can think in thirty minutes, the right or wrong things you can say in thirty minutes, the right or wrong things you can do in thirty minutes are glorious or baleful, inspiring or desperate.

Look out for the fragments of time. They are pieces of eternity. It was the half hours between shoeing horses that made Elihu Burritt the learned blacksmith, the half hours between professional calls as a physician that made Abercrombie the Christian philosopher, the half hours between his duties as schoolmaster that made Salmon P. Chase chief justice, the half hours between shoe lasts that made Henry Wilson vice president of the United States, the half hours between canal boats that made James A. Garfield president. The half hour a day for good books or bad books; the half hour a day for prayer or indolence; the half hour a day for helping others or blasting others; the half hour before you go to business, and the half hour after you return from business; that makes the difference between the scholar and the ignoramus, between the Christian and the infidel, between the saint and the demon, between triumph and catastrophe, between heaven and hell. The most tremendous things of your life and mine were certain half hours. The half hour, when in the parsonage of a country minister, I resolved to become a Christian then and there; the half hour when I decided to become a preacher of the gospel; the half hour when I first realized that my son was dead; the half hour when I stood on the top of my house in Oxford street and saw our church burn; the half hour in which I entered Jerusalem; the half hour in which I stopped on Mount Calvary; the half hour in which I stood on Mars' hill; and about ten or fifteen other half hours are the chief times of my life. You may forget the name of the exact years of most of the important events of your existence, but those half hours, like the half hour of my text, will be immortal. I do not query what you will do with the twentieth century. I do not query what you will do with this year; but what will you do with the next half hour? Upon that hinges your destiny. And during that some of you will receive the gospel and make complete surrender, and during that others of you will make final and fatal rejection of the full and free and urgent and impassioned offer of life eternal. Oh, that the next half hour might be the most glorious thirty minutes of your earthly existence!

Far back in history a great geographer stood with a sailor, looking at a globe that represented our planet, and he pointed to a place on the globe where he thought there was an undiscovered continent. The undiscovered continent was America. The geographer who pointed where he thought there was a new world was Martin Behaim, and the sailor to whom he showed it was Columbus. This last was not satisfied till he had picked that gem out of the sea and set it in the crown of the world's geography. O, ye who have been sailing up and down the rough seas of sorrow and sin, let me point out to you another continent, yea, another world, that you may yourself find—a rapturous world—and that is the world a half hour of which we now study. Oh, set sail for it! Here is the ship and here are the compasses. In other words, make this half hour the grandest half hour of your life, and become a Christian. Pray for a regenerated spirit. Louis XIV., while walking in the garden at Versailles, met Mansard, the great architect, and the architect took off his hat before the king. "Put on your hat," said the king, "for the evening is damp and cold." And Mansard, the architect, the rest of the evening kept on his hat. The dukes and marquises, standing with bare heads before the king, expressed their surprise at Mansard, but the king said: "I can make a duke or a marquis, but only God can make a Mansard." And I say to you, my hearers, only God by his convicting and converting grace can make a Christian, but He is ready this very half hour to accomplish it.

Again, my text suggests a way of studying heaven so that we can better understand it. The word "eternity," that we handle so much, is an immeasurable world. Knowing that we could not understand that word, the Bible uses it only once. We say, "Forever and ever." But how long is "Forever and ever?" I am glad that my text puts under our eye heaven for thirty minutes. As, when you see a great picture, you put a sheet of paper into a scroll and look through it, or join your forefinger to your thumb and look through the circle between, and the picture becomes more intense, so this masterpiece of heaven by St. John is more impressive when we take only thirty minutes of it at a time. Now, we have something that we can come nearer to grasping, and it is a quiet heaven. When we discourse about the multitudes of heaven, it must be almost a nervous shock to those who have all their lives been crowded by many people and who want a quiet heaven. For the last thirty-five years I have been much of the time in crowds and under public scrutiny, and amid excitements, and I have sometimes thought for a few weeks after I reach heaven I would like to go down in some quiet part of the realm, with a few friends, and for a little while try comparative solitude. Then, there are those whose hearing is so delicate that they get no satisfaction when you describe the crash of the eternal orchestra, and they feel like saying, as a good woman in Hudson, N. Y., said, after hearing me speak of the mighty chorus of heaven: "That must be a great heaven, but what will become of my poor head?" Yes, this half hour of my text is a still experience. "There was silence in heaven for half an hour."

You will find the inhabitants all at home. Enter the king's palace and take only a glimpse, for we have only thirty minutes for all heaven. "Is that Jesus?" "Yes." Just under the hair along his forehead is the mark of a wound made by a bunch of twisted brambles, and his foot on the throne has on the round of his instep another mark of a wound made by a spike, and a scar on the palm of the right hand, and a scar on the palm of the left hand. But, what a countenance! What a smile! What a grandeur! What a loveliness! What an overwhelming look of kindness and grace! Why, he looks as if he had redeemed a world! But, come on, for our time is short. Do you see that row of palaces? That is the apostolic row. Do you see that long reach of architectural glories? That is martyr row. Do you see that immense structure? That is the biggest house in heaven; that is "the house of many mansions." Do you see that wall? Shade your eyes against its burning splendor, for that is the wall of heaven, jasper at the bottom and amethyst at the top. See this river rolling through the heart of the great metropolis? That is the river concerning which those who once lived on the banks of the Hudson, or the Alabama, or the Rhine, or the Shannon, say, "We never saw the like of this for clarity and sheen." That is the chief river of heaven—so bright, so wide, so deep. But you ask: "Where are the asylums for the old?" I answer, "The inhabitants are all young." "Where are the hospitals for the lame?" "They are all agile." "Where are the infirmaries for the blind and deaf?" "They all see and hear." "Where are the almshouses for the poor?" "They are all millionaires." "Where are the inebriate asylums?" "Why, there are no saloons." "Where are the graveyards?" "Why, they never die." Pass down those boulevards of gold and amber and sapphire and see those interminable streets built by the Architect of the universe into homes, over the threshold of which sorrow never steps, and out of whose windows faces, once pale with earthly sickness, now look rubicund with immortal health.

"Oh, let me go in and see them!" you say. No, you cannot go in. There are those there who would never consent to let you come out again. You say: "Let me stay here in this place, where they never sin, where they never suffer, where they never part." No, no! Our time is short, our thirty minutes are almost gone. Come on! We must get back to earth before this half hour of heavenly silence breaks up, for in your mortal state you cannot endure the pomp and splendor and resonance when this half hour of silence is ended. The day will come when you can see heaven in full blast, but not now. I am only showing you heaven at the dullest half hour of all the eternities. Come on! There is something in the celestial appearance which makes me think that the half hour of silence will soon be over. Yonder are the white horses being hitched to chariots, and yonder are seraphs fingering harps as if about to strike them into symphony, and yonder are conquerors taking down from the blue halls of heaven the trumpets of victory. Remember, we are mortal yet and cannot endure the full roll of heavenly harmonies, and cannot endure even the silent heaven for more than half an hour. Hark! the clock in the tower of heaven begins to strike, and the half hour is ended. Descend! Come back! Come down! till your work is done. Shoulder a little longer your burdens. Fight a little longer your battles. Weep a little longer your griefs. And then take heaven not in its dullest half hour, but in its mightiest pomp, and instead of taking it for thirty minutes, take it world without end.

But how will you spend the first half hour of your heavenly citizenship after you have gone in to stay? After your prostration before the throne in worship of Him who made it possible for you to get there at all I think the rest of your first half hour in heaven will be passed in receiving your reward if you have been faithful. I have a strangely beautiful book containing the pictures of the medals struck by the English government in honor of great battles; these medals pinned over the heart of the returned heroes of the army, on great occasions, the royal family present, and the royal bands playing; the Crimean medal, the medal of the Mutiny, the Victoria Cross, the Waterloo medal. In your first half hour in heaven, in some way, you will be honored for the earthly struggles in which you won the day. Stand up before all the royal house of heaven, and receive the insignia while you are announced as victor over the temptations of the stock exchange, victor over professional allurements, victor over mechanic's shop, victor over the storehouse, victor over home worriments, victor over physical distresses, victor over hereditary depressions, victor over sin, and death, and hell. Take the badge that celebrates those victories through our Lord Jesus Christ. Take it in the presence of all the galleries, saintly, angelic and divine! While all heaven chants: "These are they who came out of great tribulation and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

Thy saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer though they die;
They see the triumph from afar,
And seize it with their eye.

COAL BEDS IN INDIANA.

Ten new coal shafts are now being sunk in the vicinity of Linton, Ind., which in the last few years has been developed into one of the most important coal fields near Chicago. Chicago and other capital to the amount of one million dollars has been invested there. There are now about twenty-six mines there and coal property is being secured all the time.

The farmers owning farms ten miles in the country are selling their coal land at the rate of $3,000 an acre.

It is claimed that on each quarter section in an area of twelve miles wide and twenty long there is now a coal shaft. Three hundred miners are on the monthly pay roll, which amounts to $100,000.

In 1900 the census gave Linton's population as 3,071; now it is 8,500.

At one time the land, of which there is an area of 30,000 acres, was traded at the rate of a quarter section for a horse. The land is bottom, has been ditched and drained until it is now worth all the way from $60 to $100 an acre.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A DOCTOR'S BAD PLIGHT.

"Two years ago, as a result of a severe cold, I lost my voice," writes Dr. M. L. Scarbrough, of Hebron, Ohio, "then began an obstinate cough. Every remedy known to me as a practicing physician for 35 years, failed, and I daily grew worse. Being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, I found quick relief, and for last ten days have felt better than for two years." Dr. MENARD'S RHEUMATIC BULLETS

WILL CURE YOUR RHEUMATISM—THEY HAVE CURED THOUSANDS OF OTHERS, THEN WHY NOT YOU?—YOUR MONEY BACK IF THEY FAIL.

The standard cure for rheumatism on two continents. Used in the leading hospitals of Europe for the last fifty years, and introduced into this country nearly a score of years ago by the world renowned French physician, Dr. Menard, and employed by successful physicians all over the country in their private practice. The exclusive right to use this formula has been acquired by the Rheumatic Bullet Co., who now offer to the general public A REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM PROVED BY TIME, at a fraction of the cost of a doctor's prescription.

WHAT THEY SAY WHO HAVE USED THE BULLETS.

Lake Johanna, Min., April 27, 1900.
Rheumatic Bullet Co., Chicago:
Gentlemen—In reply to your inquiry, I have nothing but praise for the good effects of the Rheumatic Bullets. I was so bad off last fall I had to use crutches to move about, and my limbs had blue spots. Now I am able to walk about and do such work as can be expected from one of my age. I am now entirely free from pain and my limbs are no longer stiff. I must say that I am about completely cured, after using two bottles. Very respectfully,
F. O. GACKESTAD.

Seattle, Wash., May 14, 1900.
Rheumatic Bullet Co., Chicago:
Gentlemen—I received the little sample box of Rheumatic Bullets sent me, and they did wonders. I was such a cripple I could hardly get across the floor, and yet these few Bullets made me quite well. But I am now having a new attack, and must try to get the rheumatism entirely out of my body; so please send me a full bottle for the inclosed dollar. I shall recommend your medicine whenever I find an opportunity.
Sincerely, DOROTHEA PETERSON,
320 Mercer street.

Rheumatic Bullet Co., Chicago:
Gentlemen—After suffering greatly from rheumatism for five years and received treatment from the best physicians, as well as using many patent medicines, I found no relief until I got your Rheumatic Bullets. I first ordered a sample bottle and then a large bottle, which gave me great relief, and before I had used the second bottle I could turn about in bed, which I had been unable to do for a whole year, but had to remain in the same position all the night. I am very grateful to you for your medicine, and I will take pleasure in recommending it to others suffering from this painful disease. Respectfully,
Sturgeon Bay, Wis. MRS. H. NESS.

Lockport, Ill., May, 1901.
Gentlemen—After having used two bottles of Dr. Menard's Rheumatic Bullets I must say that they have done me more good than any physician or patent medicine I have tried. I have suffered from nervous rheumatism for two years, and have found these Bullets a most remarkable remedy.

Rheumatism CURED

After 30 Years' Suffering.

"I had Rheumatism in my right knee for 30 years; sometimes better, sometimes worse, until finally it moved up into my hip and across my back, until I could hardly get about to do anything. The doctor said it was Sciatica, and nothing did me any good until I used Drefs' Gout and Rheumatic Pills. Now I can say I am as nearly without pain as any man of my age in the country. I am nearly 75 years of age and can walk 10 miles in 3 hours without being much fatigued." James Goetz, Dunkirk, N. Y.

DREFS' Gout and Rheumatic Pills

THE FIRST STEP.

No Matter How Your System Is Affected, Your Bowels Must Be Free Before a Cure Can Be Effected.

You can't get well unless your bowels do their work in a free, natural manner.

Every physician knows this, and the first thing the doctor does, when he undertakes a case, is to prescribe for the instant relieving of the bowels from the poisonous matter that is such an enemy to life and good health.

When you feel weak and listless in the morning, without energy to face the day's round of tasks and pleasures, there's something wrong.

The blood should be enriched.

And to enrich the blood, care should be taken that the food in the stomach is being converted into rich, red, vitalizing blood.

Poor stomachs can't make good blood—no use to make them try. The more painful the process of digestion is, the greater effort is the stomach putting forth to do its work as it should be done. The pains of dyspepsia are merely the efforts of the poor, jaded stomach to do its duty.

Peptorene, the Health Tablet, is a tonic digestant.

It puts the stomach in a condition to do its work properly by giving it tone, and by increasing the flow of gastric juice and saliva.

By use of Peptorene the blood is enriched, and the bowels and liver are strengthened. Food can be eaten without distress, and it takes only a little time and a box or two of the tablets to bring around a new condition of affairs—the eyes brightened, the skin freshened and the nervous, shrinking dyspeptic becomes a healthy, hearty person who can hardly wait for meal time.

STOLE VALUABLE BOOKS

A Trusted Secretary Creates Havoc in J. D. Crimmins' Private Collection.

(New York Times).

Literary thefts of a peculiar character were suggested in the Yorkville court, when Edward Kearney, thirty years of age, was arraigned before Magistrate Mayo charged with the larceny of rare books, autograph letters and valuable manuscripts from the home of John D. Crimmins.

Kearney had been employed for some years by Mr. Crimmins as second secretary, his especial duties being the care of the large and valuable library of Mr. Crimmins and the arrangement of the autograph letters which he possesses in large numbers. Mr. Crimmins was not in court yesterday and the case was adjourned to this morning, the prisoner being held in $1,500 bail.

For years Mr. Crimmins has been known among the dealers as the owner of one of the finest private libraries and the ready purchaser of any volume that suited his fancy, regardless of the price. It was through this extensive acquaintance among the dealers in bibelots that Mr. Crimmins was enabled to get the first evidence that volumes were being systematically stolen from his house and placed upon the market. For some time he had missed valuable volumes, but his treasures are scattered indiscriminately all over his large house, and as he is not of a suspicious nature, a great many of his most expensive volumes had vanished before he became convinced that thievery was going on.

One book which Mr. Crimmins especially prized was Smith's "History of Virginia." This volume was dated 1627, and after it came into Mr. Crimmins' possession he had it rebound, with insertions of plates dated 1621. In this respect it was unique, there being no other copy like it. The work disappeared from Mr. Crimmins' house some time ago.

A short time ago a dealer in rare volumes waited upon Mr. Crimmins. The latter said he would like to get a copy of Smith's "History of Virginia."

"I know where I can get just what you want," exclaimed the dealer. "I saw it only yesterday, but you can't get it for less than $200 a volume."

Mr. Crimmins asked the dealer to describe the work he had seen. As soon as he had done so Mr. Crimmins said:

"That is my work, the one that is missing from my library."

In this way the first clues were obtained as to the cause of the disappearance of so many treasures from Mr. Crimmins' house. He had missed especially, also, three volumes of the first edition of Shelley, issued from the Kelmscott press, a very early edition of Milton in two volumes, and some rare autograph letters. Among the latter was a celebrated letter of George Washington, written at Valley Forge; autograph letters of Robert Burns, extracts from which are to be found in all lives of the poet, but the whole of which had never been printed; correspondence between Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens, and some very valuable letters of Thomas Moore.

It was for the arrangement of these documents and for the care of the library that Edward Kearney, who was arraigned in court yesterday, was employed by Mr. Crimmins. Kearney is a man of education, with no small degree of literary skill and a wide knowledge of rare books, bindings, manuscripts and autographs. He has been a contributor to high-class literary periodicals in this city and has some acquaintance among book dealers.

One part of Kearney's work for Mr. Crimmins was to dig out from a mass of biographical literature little known facts about the authors of some of the rare volumes committed to his charge, and to compile this information for insertion in the front of the volume as a brief personal history. Another part of his work was to sort and classify the autograph letters, of which Mr. Crimmins owns thousands.

In the performance of these latter duties Kearney received the secret of the combination to an immense double safe which is built into the wall in the basement of Mr. Crimmins' house, and which is solely devoted to historical documents. One compartment in this safe is devoted to autograph letters of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, another is given up to the English colonial governors, another to the Dutch colonial governors. One compartment relates to jurists of the early American period, another to soldiers of the civil war.

A very large and complete collection of autograph letters of celebrated Irishmen is in this safe, one part of it being composed of records of distinguished Irishmen who were associated with American history from early times, the collection in this respect being regarded as unique.

The documents in this safe alone, and of which Kearney had absolute charge during the long absences of the Crimmins family from this city, cost a large fortune. They are so numerous that Mr. Crimmins is unable to tell just how many are missing, many of the purchases of these autograph letters having been made in masses, requiring rearrangement, for which Kearney was responsible. Documents of this kind find a ready sale in New York.

On the main floor of Mr. Crimmins' house is the principal library, though as has been said, there are beatifully bound and rare volumes lying about in all the rooms. Upstairs, however, is another library. This is devoted to Irish literature, and it contains many old Irish Bibles and missals which passed from the hands of the late Bernard Quaritch, of Piccadilly, into those of Mr. Crimmins. Many of these books cost small fortunes and are celebrated in Irish history. How many of them are missing Mr. Crimmins is unable to say.

Although Mr. Crimmins' house, in addition to containing so many rare books, is also an art gallery filled with examples of the old and modern masters, it is not supposed that any of the pictures have been taken, though there is no exact means of knowing, where the miniatures and small portraits are concerned.

"I expect to get a good many of my books back," said Mr. Crimmins last evening. "The dealers all know me, and I do not anticipate having much trouble in showing that they were taken from my house. Kearney, for whom I feel very sorry, by the way, has confessed as to many of the volumes and described where they were taken to. He had been employed by me for over three years and was his own worst enemy, being at times addicted to drink. He had access to all the books and to all the autographs in the safe during my absence and was well aware of their value. It is exceedingly disagreeable to have to bring these charges against one who was employed in my own house."

Many libraries in this country have for years coveted some of the autograph letters and rare books belonging to Mr. Crimmins. If any such works or letters had made their appearance on the market they would quickly have been identified, and for this reason it is supposed that only those articles were sold of which duplicates were known to be in existence. Some single volumes necessary to complete sets in Mr. Crimmins' library are missing. These he hopes in time to be able to recover.

GOOD ROADS FOR NEW YORK.

The great Empire state has been wofully deficient in one respect. Her public highways and thoroughfares have not kept pace with other improvements of the time and are today in such a condition that a tour from New York to Buffalo, or, in fact, between any two given points, is a feat not to be lightly undertaken by the man who rides or drives.

Until recently there has also been great apathy on the part of the very class that is most affected. But within the last year or so the farmers of the state have evinced an interest in the subject that shows, more plainly than anything else, the cumulative effects of the columns and columns of reading matter that have been printed by leading journals.

The state of New York about five years ago passed a law, called the Higbie-Armstrong law, which provided that the state would aid the counties and towns in building and improving highways under the supervision of the state engineer and surveyor. The state agreed to pay one-half the cost if the counties would pay 35 per cent. and the towns 15 per cent. Under this law the appropriations have been as follows on the part of the state: 1898, $50,000; 1899, $50,000; 1900, $150,000; 1901, $420,000.

This year, 1902, in the supply bill, $600,000 has been set apart for good roads. It is hoped that this sum will be increased to $1,000,000. The great advance in the appropriations made under this bill shows the increased interest in this subject in this state. The state engineer and surveyor reported that under the Higbie-Armstrong bill on January 1 last the counties had applied to the state to improve slightly over 1,300 miles of road; that fifty-nine miles had been built; that 109 miles were under contract, and that the counties and towns had completed arrangements for building 231 miles, having appropriated $960,000 for this purpose. It is because of this large appropriation on the part of the counties and towns that the state is urged to appropriate $1,000,000.—Harper's Weekly.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

PETER, ENEAS AND DORCAS—HOW THE APOSTLE MADE THE SICK MAN WELL AND THE DEAD WOMAN TO RISE.

Lesson for Sunday, April 13, 1902.

Topic—"Peter, Eneas and Dorcas." Text—Acts ix., 32-43.

Golden Text—"Jesus Maketh Thee Whole."—Acts ix., 34.

THE LESSON ILLUSTRATED.

(By Prof. Forrest E. Dager, D. D., in the International Evangel.)

(April 13.) Wherever man goes he is either an angel of light, scattering blessings and cheer, or an angel of darkness, spreading sin and sorrow. How rigidly we conform to the established customs of social visitation! Have we formed habits of Christian visitation? Emphasize the meanness of going from house to house telling ugly tales, spreading the evil intelligence of some companion's wrong doings. Encourage the need of going about, as Peter went, with helpful words and deeds.

Note the expression "He found a certain man." Opportunities are oftener made than found. We cannot sit down and expect that chances for doing good deeds will thrust themselves into our faces. Jesus came to seek the lost. A gentleman said to me (and it is the common expression on all sides), "My business would be a failure inside of three months if we sat down here in the office and waited for orders. We must go out and find our trade." Boys are disposed to sit around and wait for what they call "soft snaps." I met a boy who is naturally bright, but who has cultivated the habit of expecting the business world to bring its honors and wealth and lay them at his feet. In reply to my question, "What are you doing now?" he said, "Waiting for something to turn up." Peter did not wait for Eneas or Dorcas to turn up. He went out and found them. Posted on the front of a large store this sign attracted my attention, "Upset Sale." The charge against the earnest followers of Jesus, as well as against the Master Himself, was that they turned the world upside down.

There is an incident told of one who died in despair, wrapped in his blanket, in the gold district of California, moaning that there was no gold there, while scores were digging out wealth within a few miles. There is many an Eneas spiritually paralyzed, lying somewhere near us. It is our duty to find such and reveal unto them the saving power of Jesus of Nazareth.

By verse thirty-five we are reminded that every life touched by the grace of Jesus becomes a strong advertisement of His power. Frequently we see this announcement in connection with some business, "Our customers are our advertisers." Every truly redeemed person is a living advertisement of Jesus' ability to make whole. Some young people were undecided where to spend a few weeks for recuperation, when one of their companions, who had been greatly run down in health and who had gone to a mountain resort, appeared in their midst. His changed appearance, without a single word from his lips, decided them in their choice. More than all spoken or written eulogies was the eloquence of his rejuvenated body.

The expression, "alms-deeds which she did," at first impresses one as tautological, but it is peculiarly suggestive. Some persons are full of alms-deeds which they do not do. They conceive vast schemes of doing good, but never put them into execution. They sit and comment in pathetic tones upon the condition of the poor and sick, but never move to make brighter their pathway. Dorcas was not only a benevolent woman; she was also beneficent. She not only gave of money and influence; she also gave her own time and strength, the active efforts of her life to bless others. Show the young that a kind thought or sentiment should manifest itself in deeds of kindness.

The words "Tabitha, arise," addressed to the dead, bring to mind the expression, "All that are in their graves shall hear his voice." As neither life nor death can separate the just from the love of God, so neither life nor death can separate the unjust from responsibility to God. We must come forth either to the resurrection of life or to the resurrection of damnation.

"And he gave her his hand," opens to us the subject of personal contact with those dead in trespasses and sins, if we would bring them back to Jesus. It is not enough that we pray for a lost one and try to speak to that one of Jesus the life; we must reach out a helping hand whenever we can make the opportunity to do so. Recall Elijah and the dead child. After praying he stretches himself upon the child's body. We are at once reminded that contact with a dead body rendered the Israelite ceremonially unclean. How many of those who are dead in trespasses we might reach if we dared to break through the conventionalities of the social and ecclesiastical world!

The servant of God, seeking the glory of his Master, cannot be injured by contact with the sinner. Indeed, it is only through this personal contact that we can bring the life of Jesus to the wretched soul. Unless we touch and lead them by the hand of constraining love we can no more expect those who are dead in sin to walk within our churches and Sunday schools than we can expect the bodies in the cemetery to rise and join us in our worship.

ARIZONA HAS A BONANZA.

Advices from the new gold find near Patagonia, Ariz., detract not at all from the richness described by the first reports. The discovery was made by two Mexicans, Armentia and Candelaria, who set the little railroad town of Patagonia wild by appearing about a week ago with a sack of ore simply full of coarse gold. About half the population stampeded at once in the direction whence the Americans had come, and by morning the whole country for miles around had been located in a wild endeavor to cover the rich district.

When daylight came, however, it was found that the Mexicans, together with William Powers, of Patagonia, their backer, had stolen a march upon the other locaters, and had staked out the valuable plains fully half a mile from the locality seized upon by the Patagonia "sooners" as the mineralized area. A large number of claims have been located, however, on what are believed to be extensions of the Powers lode, and it is confidently believed that one of the greatest gold camps of the west will soon arise.

The original location is on a large ledge, through which runs an eight-inch streak that assays as high as $8,000, and which seems to be uniform for the length of one hundred feet already uncovered. A shaft is being sunk on the ledge already. The location is a delightful one for a camp, and it is favored with an abundant of water and wood and is readily accessible to transportation. —New York Tribune.

TITLES CHEAP IN BAVARIA.

It is not expensive to become a noble in Bavaria. To be made a simple "von" costs a matter of $375; to be raised to the "ritterstand," $500; to be made a "freiherr," $1,290; to be made a "graf" costs $2,500, while to be made a prince costs only $5,000. These prices are for only one person, but the government kindly makes reductions in the case of whole families wishing to turn noble all at once.

Miss H. L. Benning

A Young Lady of St. Joseph, Mich., Praises Wine of Cardui.

WHEN women determine to do anything they generally succeed. They are not physically strong as men are, but they have brains and possess that quality of enlisting everyone's sympathy in their cause to bring about what they desire. There are many instances where women when put on their mettle have astonished the world. Just as in other affairs in life, if a woman will have health and strives earnestly to that end, she almost invariably secures good health. But the great difficulty is for a woman to recognize that she is suffering from female weakness. The idea is shocking to her. She imagines she is the only one among her friends who is afflicted.

It is reasonable to say there are very few women who could not be well if they would always take Wine of Cardui when they need it. Miss Hattie Laura Benning, of No. 920 Broad Street, St. Joseph, Mich., is a young lady who knows what Wine of Cardui will do, because it cured her of those terrible bearing-down pains which make life a torture for so many thousand women. And she says she never has known of anyone failing to get benefit from Wine of Cardui. She writes the following letter:

"I have used your Wine of Cardui with most pleasing results, and I have never known of any one who used it who was not helped by it, so I am satisfied that it must be a very superior remedy. I used to suffer with frequent headaches and bearing down pains, but after taking three bottles of your remedy the unpleasant symptoms disappeared entirely, my appetite improved and so did my general health. I am well satisfied and give it unstinted praise."

In the face of the fact that 1,000,000 women have secured health by taking Wine of Cardui are you willing to let the offer of health go by? To do that would not only be to doom yourself to suffering but to make your children and friends suffer with you. To take the Wine of Cardui treatment does not involve a risk—there is no dangerous operation to make your life hang on a thread. There is no such alternative as this to choose from suffering. There is no pain. No publicity even. The treatment simply involves a little thought—that of taking a spoonful of Wine of Cardui three times a day in the privacy of your own home. That is all. And the result is perfect health. The Wine does not stop at regulating disordered menses. It soothes pain and suffering. It cures falling of the womb and restores the general health. No woman can afford to neglect the treatment. None would, did they know what it will do—what it has done and is doing in thousands of cases today. What Wine of Cardui has done for Miss Benning it will do for you. By starting the flow in suppressed menstruation Wine of Cardui throws the impurities from the blood. By checking flooding Wine of Cardui saves the very life blood which is ebbing away. By establishing correct menstruation the functions of the body are put on a normal and natural basis and health is the result. You cannot fail to secure health if you try. Secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today.

WINE OF CARDUI

TEMPERANCE NOTES

A PIERCING REBUKE.

How a Foreign Missionary Was Led by a Young Convert to Give Up the Tobacco Habit.

A foreign missionary strongly addicted to the use of tobacco, on leaving the United States, carried great quantities of cigars with him, fearing he would not be able to secure them in Japan. A young prince was converted under his ministry, and joined the church. For several months he seemed very happy. One day he went to the missionary and said: "Sir, sometimes it is in my heart to wish that you had never come to Japan, for you are a stumbling block in the way of my friends. There are five or six young men of the royal family (Sumari class) who are my close associates, and I tried earnestly to persuade them to accept the Christian religion, but they say they have no faith in it, for you, who are its exponent, do not live in accord with your doctrine. You preach about one Paul, who said the body is the temple of the God, and His Spirit dwells in it, and it should be kept pure, which is a reasonable service, but you defile it in every way by the use of tobacco. Sir, tobacco is keeping my princely friends out of the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The missionary was amazed. Looking at the young man steadily, he said: "If you can prove to me that this is true I will never touch tobacco again while the world stands." The prince ran from the room and quickly returned with the young men, his princely friends, who all declared that the testimony of the prince was true, that they could not accept a religion that had so little effect on its followers.

The missionary, convicted in such a manner, unhesitatingly brought the remainder of his cigars out and destroyed them in the presence of the young men, vowing never to touch tobacco again. The young prince hurriedly left the room again. Returning in a few minutes, he brought a package carefully wrapped up in paper, which he proceeded to unwrap, disclosing the stump of a cigar. "I used to watch you as you walked up and down the orchard smoking, and one day saw you throw away this piece of your cigar. I took it up and carrying it up to my room placed it where all Japanese place their gods—over the doorway and every day I would kneel under it, and pray my God to deliver you from your god—tobacco. My prayer has been answered." In the course of time the prince had the happiness of seeing al his young friends accept the religion of Christ.—India White Ribbon.

TEMPERANCE AND GREATNESS

Forcible Argument on the Declaration That the World's Great Men Have Been Drinkers.

"What really great man can you mention in the history of the world who was a teetotaler?" Such is the challenge thrown down by a leading liquor organ. "The hard drinker," continues the article, "poor, uncontrolled creature, is to be pitied.

"But scores of hard drinkers, very hard drinkers, have made great names for themselves. Alexander, Pitt, Poe, Johnson, Mirabeau, Grant, Daniel Webster, Alcibiades, Charles James Fox—to say nothing of the venerable Noah. Where are the teetotalers to match this list? They do not exist."

The writer then calls upon advocates of total abstinence to explain how so much has been achieved in spite of the "universal popularity of the rum demon."

To which we reply, simply because every generation has had its "temperance fanatics" who have not allowed the "rum demon" to do his full work. Should he ever succeed in obtaining the supremacy, we should soon cease to produce great men, or women, either, and, from being the dominant race of the world, we should become the most abject. The implication of the article that the "rum demon" deserves any credit for our present position and achievements, seems too puerile for serious consideration. Yet "such things pass for arguments" among presumably rational people, even in the twentieth century.

"The universal popularity of the rum demon!" Certainly the women of the W. C. T. U. do not deny that the "rum demon" enjoys a dangerous degree of popularity, one which, in their judgment threatens the life of our nation. Therefore the W. C. T. U. exists. Neither do we deny that it is easier to make a list of drinkers than of total abstainers, because evil is always better known than good. If a prominent man drinks to excess all the world knows it. If he is a total abstainer, "the world" pays little attention to that fact.

While we can readily "mention" such "really great men" as Lincoln, Gladstone and Whittier, who were teetotalers, a better text for a temperance lecture could hardly be found than this very list given by the liquor organ. First Gen. Grant's name is to be cast out. Gen. Grant was not even a hard drinker. It is a question whether, during the years when he acquired his fame, he drank at all. We know that enemies slandered him, that he was reported drunk at the battle of Shiloh, but that is acknowledged on all sides now to be a vile slander. We were personally acquainted with a captain who served under him, a man of unquestioned truthfulness, whom we have more than once heard say that, though he had many times been in Grant's tent when liquor was served, he never saw Grant drink it and he had repeatedly heard Grant say: "Help yourselves, gentlemen, you know that I do not touch it."

We are at a loss to know what Johnson is meant. We freely acknowledge that Andrew Johnson disgraced himself and the nation by being drunk at his inauguration as vice president. But if he is a "really great man," we shall have no trouble whatever in making up a list of "really great" teetotalers. If Dr. Samuel Johnson is meant, we have only to say that he does not belong to the liquor list. Macaulay, in his sketch of Dr. Johnson, in the Encyclopedia Brittanica, says explicitly that Johnson was a water drinker, unlike Boswell, who was a wine bibber. That he was a "really great man" no one questions and he may well be mentioned second in the list of great teetotalers.

Alexander was indeed a hard drinker and died in a drunken debauch, perhaps to drown his sorrow because there were "no more worlds to conquer." He indeed made "a great name for himself," but whatever real service he might have done humanity by maintaining a world kingdom was destroyed by his untimely death.

Mirabeau, one of the gratest of French statesmen, died a victim of his own excesses at the age of 42, at the beginning of the French revolution, when he was the one hope of securing for France a constitutional monarchy, the only possible means by which his country could have been saved from the "reign of terror." He made a great name for himself, in spite of the fact that he was a "very hard drinker;" he undoubtedly would have made a much greater name had he been a teetotaler and no one can tell what might have been his service to his distressed country.

Poe? Yes, and everyone knows under what a dark eclipse of dissipation his genius so soon went out.

Alcibiades, by the brilliancy of his genius, made a "great name for himself," but his life history gives cause for only regret that a man of such gifts should have so wasted them. He thought only of himself, injured his powers by his excesses and betrayed every trust reposed in him in his efforts to make for himself a "great name."

No one of all the list but exemplifies the ruin wrought by the "rum demon." And we could make out a long list, as could anyone, of persons who have shown undoubted ability to "make for themselves great names," but whose lives went out in utter ruin because of the "rum demon." Can the liquor organ furnish the name of a single person ruined by being a teetotaler?—Union Signal.

DRUNKENNESS IN GERMANY.

Political Economists Appalled at the Alcohol Problem in the Land of Beer.

It is little wonder that German political economists are appalled at their alcohol problem. An article on drunkenness in the sixth volume of Dr. Konrad's "Cyclopedia of Political Economy" makes the statement that one-fourteenth of the men in gainful occupations are employed in the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, and that one-fifteenth of the arable land is required to grow the materials for these drinks. The government of Wurtemberg has statistics showing that 15.8 per cent. of the average income of its inhabitants is spent upon liquor. Throughout Germany the average expenditure for a family of five for drink is $62.50 annually.

We have heard "there is little drunkenness in Germany," but Dr. Bode states that "in Prussia alone 8,162 cases of delirium tremens were treated in the hospitals in 1885."

He says: "A great proportion of the epilepsy, idiocy and mental deficiency are also due to the drunken habits of the parents or of the afflicted themselves." In 1880 one person in every 1,515 Prussians became insane by means of drink. He mentions that "prison officials like Baer, Illig and Krohne estimate that at least half of the crimes and misdemeanors must be attributed to drunkenness, and that 93,576 acts of violence tried in the courts in 1889 were the result of drink." "Experts in the care of the poor trace from 50 to 90 per cent. of the poverty to the drink customs. From 1882-91 there were 44,539 tramps in the German labor colonies; all but 23 per cent. of these were thus degraded through drunkenness."—Christian Endeavor World.

BOWSER BECALMED.

ASTONISHES HIS WIFE BY FINDING NOTHING TO KICK ABOUT.

It Worries Her, and In Alarm She Relates to Him a String of Mishaps to Ruffle His Temper, but He Remains Calm and Placid.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.]

MRS. BOWSER had made up her mind that there would be trouble. The gas bill had come in, the water tax was due, the coal nearly out, the butcher had sent a tough steak, and a boy had broken one of the front windows with a snowball. In addition, the cook had given notice, a water pipe was leaking, and some one had stolen the doormat. It was with fear and trembling that she heard his step, but if he had missed the doormat as he entered he didn't say anything about it. He simply observed that it would be a cold night and led the way down to dinner. It took all his muscle to cut the steak, but he hadn't a word to say about its toughness. He couldn't help but hear the cook thrashing around in the kitchen in the way that cooks do when they have given notice, but he made no criticisms.

"Don't you feel well this evening?" asked Mrs. Bowser after wondering what could have happened to him during the day.

"Never better," he pleasantly answered.

"I'm sorry about the steak, and I shall speak to the butcher about it."

"Yes, it's a little tough, but nothing to kick over. I suppose he did his best."

"First rate, first rate."

"And—and nothing happened?"

"Nothing at all, dear."

Mrs. Bowser was nonplused, but she could not help believing that some calamity was about to descend upon the house. She was almost in a tremble as they left the table, but Mr. Bowser lighted his cigar and sat down to his paper with a peaceful expression on his face. The cat jumped upon his knee and he stroked her back affectionately, and ten minutes passed before Mrs. Bowser dared to say:

"The boys on the street were having a snowball fight today, and one of them broke our window."

"Yes, I noticed it as I came along," was the quiet reply.

On other occasions Mr. Bowser would have jumped a foot high and vowed by the great horn spoon that he would hunt that boy to his tomb and sue his father fourteen times over, but he never even turned red in the face.

"The cook wants to leave Saturday," continued Mrs. Bowser, feeling pretty sure that she would be held to blame for it.

"Do you remember when you ordered the last coal?"

"No, but it ought to have been burned up by this time. Speak to me in the morning, and I will order some more."

Mrs. Bowser turned pale as she looked at him. No kick over the steak! No kick over the cook! No kick over the broken window! No kick over the coal! He was Mr. Bowser sure enough, but what had happened since he found fault with the coffee at breakfast?

"We shall have to have a plumber tomorrow, as one of the pipes is leaking," she finally announced.

"Very well," he replied.

"I am almost inclined to think the cook hit it with an ax."

"I should hardly say so. Water pipes around a house are always bursting, and no one can be held to blame for it."

"There ought to be more police on this street. A big boy came along about 4 o'clock and stole our doormat. I raised the window and called to him, but he only made up faces at me."

"Well, it was rather an old mat," replied Mr. Bowser as he looked up with a smile on his face, "and the boy probably took it out of a spirit of deviltry. I played all such games as that when I was a boy."

Even the cat began to feel astonished now. She looked up into his face and then over to Mrs. Bowser, and, fearing some sort of a job was being put up on her, she leaped to the floor and crawled under the lounge. Mrs. Bowser's heart was palpitating as she remembered that nearly all kickers suddenly cease to kick a day or two before their death, and she determined that Mr. Bowser must be aroused if he was to be saved. With malice aforethought she touched upon his sorest subject by asking:

"Haven't you found anything new in fire escapes lately?"

"No, nothing new," he replied, with a laugh. "I guess I've bought all that have been patented."

"And you haven't come across any more hair dyes or tonics?"

"Not a one."

"I was wondering why you didn't do gymnastics in the garret any more for the benefit of your rheumatism."

"Because I haven't any rheumatism," he replied. "I used to be pretty silly about those things, didn't I?"

Mrs. Bowser had to get up and walk down the hall to the front door to get a long breath and recover her composure. Death was surely on Mr. Bowser's trail, and he might fall over any minute.

"Are you going to buy a horse or cow or chickens?" she asked as she returned.

"Of course not," he answered.

"Perhaps you are going to get another hog?"

"No. What's the matter, dear? You look pale and perturbed. If you are not well, we must send for the doctor."

"I am well, but—but you are going to try to ride the bike again?"

"Not at all. I have come to the conclusion that I am too fat."

"Did I tell you that the gas bill had come in?"

"No, but I knew it was time for it."

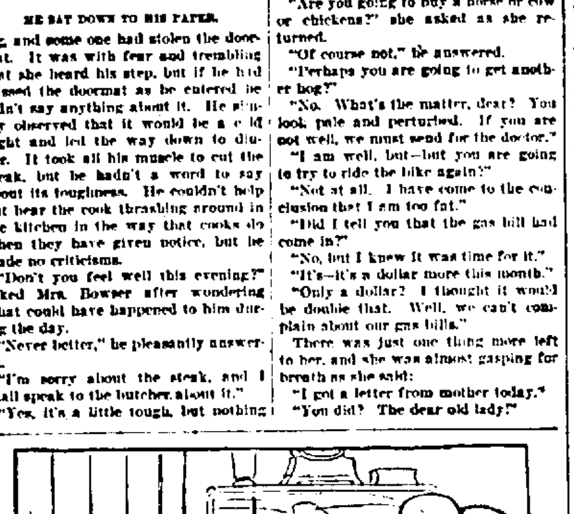

"It's—it's a dollar more this month."

"Only a dollar? I thought it would be double that. Well, we can't complain about our gas bills."

There was just one thing more left to her, and she was almost gasping for breath as she said:

"I got a letter from mother today."

"You did? The dear old lady!"

THE CAT BEGAN TO FEEL ASTONISHED.

"And she's coming to see us next week."

"Good! We'll give her the best in the house. Tell her I'd like to have her stay at least six months."

"You—you don't mean it!"

"Certainly I do. Your mother is one of the nicest old ladies in all the world, and I'm only sorry that she can't live with us all the time. What's the matter, dear?"

Mrs. Bowser choked up and couldn't reply. She sought the refuge of her room and broke down and wept, and the cat came out of hiding and sat down in front of Mr. Bowser and wondered where on earth the family had got to.

DICK, THE BLUEJAY.

A Pet Bird That Developed Wonderful Intelligence.

"I want to speak a good word for the bluejays and tell you what a nice pet Dick was. Some people think they are always cross and troublesome, but you know they stay in our orchards all winter, and when the cold is bitter and the snow deep one cannot help but love to see this beautiful blue bird, with his kingly topknot, as he leaves the winter storms and flits about from tree to tree when other birds are gone.

"They love to be near houses and barns, and we used to throw our crumbs on the snow for them. We said the buds were their meal and our crumbs their dessert. They like to build their nests of roots and sticks in an old apple tree, quite low down and near the trunk.

"One spring a pair of bluejays built the nest so low we could peep in, and we saw five eggs of a greenish gray color, spotted with brown. We were very careful and quiet, so as not to frighten the dear mother bird. At first she used to sit near and scold a good deal, but at last she would sit and look at us with a saucy twist of her head and a sort of 'Well, what do you want to see now?' in her eye.

"After many days we saw five little bills sticking up in the nest and five hungry mouths opened wide, and, oh, the nest seemed so crowded! The babies grew, and I used to help feed them. Then I took one of them to the house every day for a little while. I used to feed him on corn bread, yolk of egg and potato and talk to him and stroke his beautiful feathers, then I would take him back to the nest.

"We got to be great friends. He would follow me around outdoors or into the house if we were at the table. He was not a bit afraid. Indeed, if we did not watch him he would fly into the middle of the table. When the other birdies left the nest, Dick seemed to want to stay with me. He would let no one else feed him.

"So I gave him an old tin lantern for his home. I never shut him up in a cage. He was free to fly where he liked, but he always slept in the lantern.

"When I had to go to school in the fall, Dick was lonesome and followed me one day as I started off. I let him go as far as an old willow that grew by the path; then I was afraid he would get lost if he went farther, so I took off my sunbonnet and chased him part way home. Do you know, after this Dick always went with me to the tree, and, what was more wonderful, he used to come there to meet me as I came from school. That made me very happy. I had no brothers or sisters, but Dick and I had good times walking home together. He used to light on my basket and tease and coax until I gave him the bits from my lunch, which I always saved for him."—Child Garden.

The Seashore Inhabitants.

Very numerous are the shells which the shores yield at low tide. Often it happens that the shells that are picked up have not come to the shallows by chance, but have been flung upon the shore with masses of seaweed in which they were entangled.

The shells or mollusks are not only beautiful in themselves; some of them are valued as articles of food; some, again, produce pearls, especially those of warmer climates.

The scallop, of more than one kind, lies buried deeply in the mud or sand. Some of these have been called "sea butterflies." There is one kind of a dark brown color, beautifully marked with red and white. To get the remarkable shell, which has the name of the "razor," one must dig deeply in the sand. Its shell is very brittle. It is long, narrow and toothed. Below the shallows, or in the mud, are many of the beetle tribe, which thrive in salt water and hunt up worms. Some of them can nip sharply if they are annoyed.

Birds Shun This Tree.

A German authority has recently announced the discovery of a tree in the forests of central India which has most curious characteristics. The leaves of the tree are of a highly sensitive nature and so full of electricity that whoever touches one of them receives an electric shock. It has a very singular effect upon a magnetic needle and will influence it at a distance of even seventy feet. The electrical strength of the tree varies according to the time of day, it being strongest at midday and weakest at midnight. In wet weather its powers disappear altogether. Birds never approach the tree, nor have insects ever been seen upon it.

SUNSHINE AND RAIN.

[A recitation for two children.]

THE SUNSHINE (proudly):
I am the beautiful sunshine bright,
So fair and lovely to see;
I shed o'er the world my warmth and light,
And none can compare with me!

THE RAIN (simply):
I am the beautiful, soft, cool rain,
And the sweetest comfort I bring;
I open the little green buds again;
I am the joy of spring!

THE SUNSHINE (indignantly):
But I am the sunshine, bright and gay
And make all around me glad,
You cannot compare with me, I say,
For the rain is dreary and sad!

THE RAIN (resentfully):
Yet the tender, soft, refreshing rain,
When the land is parched and dry,
Will revive the drooping flowers again,
Such wonderful power have I!

THE SUNSHINE (angrily):
Pray, what is your power compared to mine?
I ripen the corn and the fruit
As over the land I beam and shine;
My power you cannot dispute!

THE RAIN (emphatically):
The corn would never spring from the grain,
And the fruit and the flowers would die
Without the help of the gentle rain;
My power you cannot deny!

THE SUNSHINE (proudly):
Oh, think how great and how grand am I,
How my radiance shines afar,
And think of my rainbows fair in the sky,
How beautiful, too, they are!

THE RAIN (conclusively):
But where would your beautiful rainbows be
Without the help of the rain?
With no little glistening drops from me
They'd soon disappear again!

THE SUNSHINE (thoughtfully):
That didn't occur to me, you know,
But now it is perfectly clear;
'Tis the rain and the sun that make the bow;
We do it together, my dear!

THE RAIN (joyfully):
Yes, little sunshine, that is the way
With the rain and sunbeams fair;
We work together every day
And blessings spread everywhere!

THE SUNSHINE (sweetly):
I am the beautiful sunshine gay.

THE RAIN (sweetly):
And I am the sweet, cool rain!

THE SUNSHINE AND THE RAIN TOGETHER
(joining hands affectionately):
Which is the better we'll leave you to say,
But we'll never quarrel again!

INFLUENCE

MENTAL AND MORAL.

The state of the mother during gestation may influence the whole future of the child. It is highly important that pregnant women meet the issue with calm composure and with as little pain as possible. Animals of the lower kingdom require no outside aid to undergo painless gestation and delivery of young, for they are not physically hampered or deformed by dress.

Women suffer agonies when with child, unless they make use of the discoveries of art and science that counteract the effect of dress follies. To-day in every drug store there is one liniment sold at $1 per bottle, which excels in virtue and safeness any like remedy, to be applied externally by hand once a day on the skin in the region of the uterus. It is not a drug for you to swallow. It is Mother's Friend, so named because it has never failed to give comfort and ease to any woman who ever used it in motherhood.

A NEW BOAT SCHEME.

A Hamburg engineer is exhibiting the model of a new kind of steamer in Paris. The most noticeable feature of Herr Brohan's vessel is the disposal of the propellers, of which there are four—one forward, another just before the rudder and two at the stern. The vessel is flat-bottomed, but there is a short keel in the center and two false keels forward, which would keep the hull off the bottom in case of grounding, and between which the first-mentioned screw revolves. The inventor believes that with a steamer 300 feet long, built according to his design, he could make the passage from Havre to New York in four days.

It's Pretty Hard

For any Fort Wayne woman to attend to household duties with the aches and pains of a bad back.

A woman's back wasn't made to ache and it won't if the kidneys are well.

Most backache pains, most nervous headaches and other bodily troubles of womankind come from sick kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Cure every form of kidney ills; cure all urinary troubles, diabetes, down to the first stages of Bright's disease. They are endorsed by Fort Wayne people.

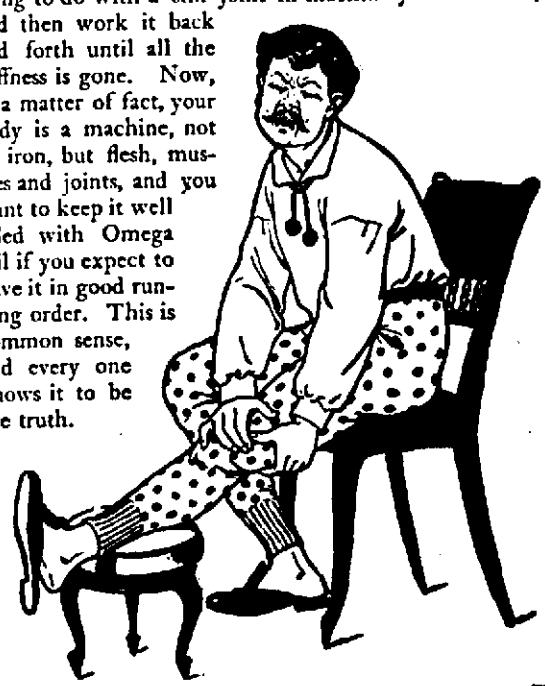

Mrs. A. S. Booth, who lives at 70 Barr street, says: "I had kidney trouble ever since I can remember and a backache seemed to be as much a part of me as my hands or feet. I had a hemorrhage of the kidneys, which I thought was going to end my life. I became so nervous that I could not control myself and I had great difficulty in remembering things. One day a lady friend of mine was going to get Doan's Kidney Pills and I thought I would also try them, so I got a box at Meyer Bros. & Co.'s drug store. I began taking them and continued the treatment, with the result that I steadily gained in health from the commencement until I was better than I had been in a long time."

Stiff Joints

Omega Oil

What a stiff joint needs more than anything else is Omega Oil. The next need is plenty of massage, or rubbing. The rubbing makes the blood flow faster, and the Oil loosens up and softens the hard, stiff places. The first thing to do with a stiff joint in machinery is to oil it, and then work it back and forth until all the stiffness is gone. Now, as a matter of fact, your body is a machine, not of iron, but flesh, muscles and joints, and you want to keep it well oiled with Omega Oil if you expect to have it in good running order. This is common sense, and every one knows it to be the truth.

Omega Oil is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for. 77

Why not have your other teeth attended to? We can save you money and give a Guarantee with our work. Ask your friends that have been here and you will find we are the reliable Dentists. Our work speaks for itself.

Remember, we are in no way connected with any of the smaller offices of this city.

UNION PAINLESS DENTISTS,

Dr. C. F. Walters, Mgr.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Workmen's clubs are being extensively boycotted by brewers in the north of England. The reason assigned is that such clubs attract custom from the public houses.

A CHATTANOOGA DRUGGIST'S STATEMENT.

Robt. J. Miller, proprietor of the Read House Drug Store of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes: "There is more merit in Foley's Honey and Tar than in any other cough syrup. The calls for it multiply wonderfully and we sell more of it than all other cough syrups combined." Sold by Dreier & Bro. and Pellens & Polster.

A plumber who was arrested in Rome for stealing jewelry confessed that he swallowed diamonds and other stones valued at $15,000, and sold the mountings.

COLDS

CUSHIONED HANDLE BARS.

The constant jar sustained while riding over rough pavements or country roads is somewhat fatiguing to the cycler, especially on long distance rides, when it is desirable to support a portion of the weight on the handle bars, and it has occurred to J. K. Buehm and C. R. Waldron, of Ceylon, Ohio, to lessen the shock of the rough places by the use of the cushioned handle bar. The invention provides an elastic or yielding pair of handles, which will absorb the vibrations when the cycler is riding over a rough stretch of pavement, instead of transmitting them to the head and arms, as is the case with a rigid bar. The two inner ends of the bar are pivoted to the central head, with segmental gears projecting into the head and engaging the teeth of a vertical rack bar. This rack bar is under spring tension and when the rider leans forward on the handles his weight overcomes the tension and allows the bar to tilt downward, according to the amount of pressure exerted. At the bottom of the rack bar is a nut, which can be adjusted to adapt the tension of the spring to suit riders of different weight. As the movement of the bar is all in a vertical direction, this device will not interfere with the steering qualities of the wheel.

A NEARLY FATAL RUNAWAY

Started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill., which defied doctors and all remedies for four years. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him. Just as good for Boils, Burns, Bruises, Cuts, Corns, Scalds, Skin Eruptions and Piles. 25c at Dreier & Bro.'s drug store.
